CONTENTS

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE AND EFFECT

I. Purpose and Effect

Bill 22-0107, the "Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2018", is the Committee's omnibus campaign finance reform legislation, and it includes aspects of several campaign finance-related bills pending before the Council: B22-0008, the "Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment of 2017";[1] B22-0032, the "Clean Elections Amendment Act of 2017";[2] B22-0047, the "Government Contractor Pay-to-Play Prevention Amendment Act of 2017";[3] B22-0051, the "Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017";[4] and B22-0107, the "Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017".[5]

The Committee Print is the second phase of the Committee's campaign finance reform efforts. The first phase was the passage of the B22-0192, the "Fair Elections Amendment Act of 2018", which established a program to provide public funding to qualified candidates who forgo campaign contributions from corporations and traditional political action committees ("PACs").[6] On June 29, 2017, the Committee held a public hearing on B22-0192, at which approximately seventy witnesses testified overwhelmingly in support of public financing and in support of campaign finance reform generally. Shortly thereafter, on July 10, 2017, the Committee held a hearing on four other campaign finance reform-related measures: B22-0008, B22-0032, B22-0051, and B22-0107. These four bills sought to address issues such as "pay-to-play" government contracting,[7] improper coordination of independent expenditures, enhanced disclosure requirements, and the retirement of campaign debt. Taken together, the two hearings reflect the Committee's examination of strategies to enhance the District's campaign finance laws and address the relationship between money and power in District elections. The Council unanimously passed the Fair Elections Amendment Act of 2018 in early 2018, and the Council approved funding for the law in the Fiscal Year 2019 budget.[8] In B22-0107, the Committee undertakes a comprehensive second-phase examination of campaign finance law in the District and proposes reforms to limit influence, prevent corruption, and increase transparency and disclosure.

[7] "Pay-to-play" government contracting is the practice of an individual or business entity making campaign contributions to a public official with the hope of winning a government contract. "Pay-to-play" practices can be viewed as a subtler form of political corruption, because they may involve anticipatory action and potential future benefits, as opposed to any explicit quid pro quo agreement.

II. Background

a. Overview of Proposals Before the Committee

Four campaign finance reform-related bills have been referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and Public Safety thus far in Council Period 22, and a fifth is pending in the Committee of the Whole. First, on January 5, 2017, B22-0008, the "Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment of 2017", was introduced by Chairman Mendelson at the request of Attorney General Karl Racine. The bill focuses on reducing the appearance and actuality of pay-to-play government contracting by limiting who can do business with the District and contribute to political campaigns. It restricts a person who has made contributions to certain recipients, including officials and candidates who are involved in the awarding of contracts, from engaging in business with the District for two years from the date the contribution or solicitation was made. The bill defines "engaging in business dealings with the District" as receiving a grant from the District that is valued at $100,000 or more; receiving a tax abatement from the District that is valued at $100,000 or more; entering into an agreement with the District for the acquisition, sale, or lease of any land or building; or entering into a contract with the District valued at $100,000 or more.

In addition, the Attorney General's bill would amend the District's campaign coordination laws by clarifying that any expenditure coordinated with a candidate's campaign should be treated like a contribution. It also establishes a rebuttable presumption that a campaign expenditure was coordinated in the following scenarios: (1) if the campaign provides information about its needs or plans to the person making the expenditure; (2) if the campaign and the person making the expenditure share a common vendor providing campaign or fundraising strategy; or (3) if the group making the expenditure is run by a candidate's immediate family member or former high-level staff.

On January 10, 2017, B22-0051, the "Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017", was introduced by Councilmembers Vincent Gray and Trayon White and referred to this Committee. This bill similarly aims to reduce "pay-to-play" contracting. It prevents the District from entering into contracts with contractors seeking or holding contracts or grants with the District with a cumulative value of $250,000 or more who have made a contribution or expenditure to certain recipients, including officials and candidates who could influence the award of a contract, within specified dates. If the covered contractor's bid is successful, the covered contractor may not make contributions or expenditures between the date the covered contractor knows that a solicitation will be issued and one year after final payment is made on the contract or grant. If the covered contractor's bid is unsuccessful, then the covered contractor may not make contributions or expenditures between the date the covered contractor knows that a solicitation will be issued and the date of the termination of the negotiations or notification that the bid was unsuccessful.

In Councilmember Gray's bill, the prohibition on contributions and expenditures also applies to "related parties", which includes trusts, limited liability corporations ("LLCs"), general partners of such LLCs, and political committees. It also applies, if the covered contractor is a corporation, to any officer or director of the corporation or to any principal who has a controlling interest. Under the bill, immediate family members of a covered contractor, and the covered contractor's officers, directors, and principals, would be allowed to make campaign contributions and expenditures, but they may not exceed an aggregate of $300 per person per election. The existing definition of "immediate family members" in D.C. Official Code § 1-1161.01(26) is broad, encompassing "the spouse or domestic partner of a public official or employee and any parent, grandparent, brother, sister, or child of the public official or employee, and the spouse or domestic partner of any such parent, grandparent, brother, sister, or child." The bill also strengthens disclosure requirements by providing that all election-related advertisements must include a disclaimer naming the ad's sponsor.

On January 10, 2017, two other campaign finance-related bills were introduced. B22-0032, the "Clean Elections Amendment Act of 2017", was introduced by Councilmember Elissa Silverman, Committee Chairperson Allen, and Councilmembers Mary Cheh, David Grosso, and Brianne Nadeau. The bill, referred to this Committee, addresses improper coordination between campaigns and independent expenditure committees by identifying under which circumstances independent expenditures are truly independent. The bill also provides that only individuals may contribute to political committees and constituent-service programs.

B22-0047, the "Government Contractor Pay-to-Play Prevention Amendment of 2017", was introduced by Chairman Phil Mendelson, along with Committee Chairperson Charles Allen and Councilmembers Mary Cheh, Brianne Nadeau, Elissa Silverman, and Robert White. The bill was referred to the Committee of the Whole, and it prohibits government contracts valued at $100,000 or more with businesses and individuals that have made contributions to elected officials during a certain period.

Lastly, on February 7, 2017, B22-0107, the "Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017", was introduced by Committee Chairperson Charles Allen and Councilmembers Anita Bonds and David Grosso. The introduced version of the bill, now the Committee Print, required principal campaign committees to retire all their debts within six months after an election, so that campaign accounts would no longer be allowed to remain open for an unlimited period of time. The bill also required committees and candidates to obtain consent before using a person's likeness in campaign literature, advertisements, websites, or social media.

b. Overview of the Committee Print

The Committee Print centers around six themes: (1) reforming agency oversight of the District's campaign finance laws; (2) tackling the perception and actuality of government contractor pay-to-play; (3) limiting the influence of money as a corrupting force in District politics; (4) addressing improper coordination between public officials, political committees, PACs, and independent expenditure committees ("IECs"); (5) enhancing disclosure requirements and training; and (6) keeping pace with evolving case law. The Committee proposes these far-reaching reforms in an attempt to reverse the perception and reality of corruption in District politics and strengthen public trust in both the election process and in public officials.

1. Reforming Agency Oversight of the District's Campaign Finance Laws

Currently, the Office of Campaign Finance ("OCF") is overseen by a three-member Board of Elections ("BOE"). The Board also oversees the agency known as the Board of Elections – governed by an Executive Director – which administers the District's elections.[9] The Board is currently – and has historically been – primarily focused on elections issues, rather than on campaign finance issues, as most recently evidenced by Board Chairperson Michael Bennett's testimony at his re-confirmation hearing before the Committee.[10] Committee observations of Board actions and discussions over the past several years have underscored this de-prioritization. In addition, none of the current Board members have a background in campaign finance law, policy, or technology – a troubling deficiency, given the impending effective date of the Fair Elections Program. Moreover, the Committee has repeatedly heard public testimony that OCF is yet to reach its full potential. For example, at the Committee's March 8, 2018, Performance Oversight Hearing on the agency, Aquene Freechild, Co-Director of Public Citizen's Democracy is For People Campaign, testified that OCF needs to become an "energetic regulator that is committed to transparency, clear communication, and fairness".[11] She noted that to reach this goal and to regain the public's trust in the agency, there needs to be a "significant cultural shift and increase in activity at OCF".[12]

The Committee believes that OCF has been deprived of the vision and experience of a Board with subject-matter expertise. Although elections and campaign finance issues are intimately related, the Committee believes that OCF would be better served with its own Board, composed of members specifically experienced in campaign finance matters. With its own Board, OCF and its leadership would benefit from more direct oversight and support. The Committee Print, therefore, removes OCF from under BOE's jurisdiction and creates a new, standalone, independent Campaign Finance Board ("CFB"). The CFB's purpose will be to administer, enforce, and implement the District's campaign finance laws and regulations, refer alleged violations for prosecution, seek out best practices, and issue rules.

The CFB's structure mimics that of BOE and the Board of Ethics and Government Accountability ("BEGA"). It will consist of five members appointed by the Mayor with the advice and consent of the Council. When appointing and confirming members of the Board, the Mayor [9] The Board of Elections was created by the District of Columbia Election Code of 1955, approved August 12, 1955 (69 Stat. 699; D.C. Official Code § 1-1001.01 et seq.), and it assumed responsibility for the District's campaign finance laws and regulations almost two decades later through the District of Columbia Campaign Finance Reform Act, approved August 14, 1974 (88 Stat. 455; Pub. L. 93-376).

[10] Upon questioning from Chairperson Allen, Mr. Bennett explained the Board's oversight role with respect to BOE and OCF. He noted that OCF's work is "process and data driven", and the Board mostly just "keeps up with what's going on" at the agency. In contrast, he stated, the Board is more involved in the day-to-day issues on the elections "side of the house". He testified that, as Chair, he spends more time on elections administration than on campaign finance issues. See, Council of the District of Columbia Committee on the Judiciary and Public Safety, Public Hearing on PR22-0838, the "District of Columbia Board of Elections Michael Bennett Confirmation resolution of 2018" (oral testimony of Michael Bennett, Chairperson, Board of Elections), available at http://dc.granicus.com/MediaPlayer.php?view_id=44&clip_id=4578.

and Council, respectively, will be required to consider whether the individuals possess knowledge, training, or experience in campaign finance law or administration. Members must be duly-registered voters, have resided in the District continuously since the beginning of the three-year period ending on the day the person is appointed, and not hold any other office or employment in the District government. While serving on the Board, a member may not: (1) campaign for any other public office; (2) act as a leader or hold any office in a political party or political committee, PAC, or IEC; (3) participate in any political campaign in any District election; (4) be a lobbyist; (5) be an officer, director, or employee of an organization receiving District funds who has managerial or discretionary responsibilities with respect to those funds; or (6) use their status as a member to directly or indirectly attempt to influence any decision of the District government relating to any action that is not within the CFB's purview. Board members will receive compensation identical to that of the BOE members and may be removed for good cause.

Under the Committee Print, all investigations of alleged violations will be made by the Director of Campaign Finance in the Director's discretion. The Director must present evidence concerning alleged violations to the Board within a reasonable time if he or she believes that sufficient evidence exists to constitute a violation. Following the presentation of evidence, the Board may refer the matter for prosecution or dismiss the action. If the Director fails to present a matter or advises the Board that insufficient evidence exists to present a matter or more time is needed to investigate the matter further, the Board may order the Director to present the matter within ninety days of its receipt. This procedure mirrors current law.

Existing law requires the Director of Campaign Finance to publish a biennial report by January 31 of each odd-numbered year with a description of the receipts and expenditures of candidates for Mayor, Attorney General, Chairman and members of the Council, members of the State Board of Education, shadow Senator, and shadow Representative, but excluding candidates for Advisory Neighborhood Commissioner. The Committee Print aligns the deadline for the report with BEGA's December 31 annual best practices report, and also includes information about IECs. As amended, the report must provide, at a minimum, the following information, as well as other information that the Director considers appropriate:

(1) A summary of each candidate's receipts, in dollar amount and percentage terms, by categories of contributors that the Director considers appropriate, such as the candidate himself or herself, individuals, political committees, corporations, partnerships, and labor organizations;
(2) A summary of each candidate's receipts, in dollar amount and percentage terms, by the size of the donation, including donations of $500 or more; donations of $250 or more but less than $500; donations of $100 or more but less than $250; and donations of less than $100;
(3) The total amount of a candidate's receipts and expenditures for primary and general elections, respectively, when applicable;
(4) A summary of each candidate's expenditures, in dollar amount and percentage terms, by operating expenditures, transfers to other authorized committees, loan repayments, and refunds of contributions; and
(5) A summary of the receipts and expenditures of political committees, PACs, and IECs using categories considered appropriate by the Director.

All reports published by the CFB must be now published online.

The Committee Print again mirrors BOE's jurisdiction by authorizing the CFB to issue advisory opinions on compliance with the District's campaign finance laws – either on its own initiative or in response to a request from a public official, political committee, PAC, IEC, an official of a political party, any person required to or who reasonably anticipates being required to submit filings to the CFB, or any other person under the CFB's jurisdiction. The CFB must publish a statement of each request, without identifying the person seeking the opinion, in the District of Columbia Register within twenty days after its receipt. Comments upon the requested opinion must be received for a period of at least fifteen days following publication.

The Committee is confident that this restructuring will allow the new CFB to thrive. By creating a dedicated board for campaign finance matters, the Committee Print provides the agency with the full spectrum of tools and resources it needs to rigorously and robustly enforce and implement the District's campaign finance laws. Though the issues surrounding elections and campaign finance are undeniably connected, the Committee believes that the District will benefit greatly from a CFB able to provide specific campaign finance-related support, expertise, and vision. Such a bifurcated structure appears in other jurisdictions: for example, New York City has an independent Campaign Finance Board, tasked with administering the city's campaign finance system (which also includes a robust public financing program).[13]

2. Tackling the Perception and Actuality of Government Contractor Pay-to-Play

i. The Perception or Actuality of "Pay-to-Play" Contracting in the District

One of the major concerns that arose at the Committee's hearing on the pending campaign finance measures was that, in our current system, wealthy and corporate contributors have an outsized influence in local politics. Specifically, witnesses testified to both a perception and a reality in the District that wealthy developers and corporations unduly influence elected officials' decisions through campaign contributions and "pay-to-play" politics.

During the hearing, there was a spirited debate among Councilmembers in attendance and with the public witnesses about this issue. Adav Noti, from the Campaign Legal Center, testified that the Council plays a significant role in the oversight of the contracting process, which can create the appearance of, as well as the opportunity for, favoritism toward political supporters.[14] One Councilmember referenced a Washington Post poll citing the statistic that 64% of District residents believe that the District government catering to developers is a major cause of the lack of affordable housing in the city.[15] This Councilmember noted that money's impact reaches beyond campaigns to also affect how constituents perceive the decisions of officials once in office, and without stronger legislative efforts to address these concerns, constituents begin to assume officials make decisions based purely on who donated how much money to their campaigns, with this sentiment contributing to voter apathy.

In a letter submitted to the Committee, the Campaign Legal Center stated that the proposed provisions would "meaningfully inhibit the types of pay-to-play scandals that have cast a shadow over the District's government in recent years".[16] Aquene Freechild, from Public Citizen, testified that a recent report by her organization showed that 40% of contributions came from construction and real estate corporations.[17] She specifically pointed to Fort Myer Construction, testifying that the corporation gave $3,000 to various candidates.[18] However, she noted that if executives, family members, and family trusts related to the corporation were included, that number would increase to more than $20,000 in contributions.[19] The company's two top executives, their immediate family members, and their family trusts gave an additional $17,700 to Council campaigns.[20]

Another Councilmember disagreed that pay-to-play contracting is a problem in the District, expressing his belief that this legislation is seeking to solve a problem that does not exist. He noted that the Council does not issue contracts, but rather only reviews multiyear contracts and contracts with a value over $1 million. For this reason, the Councilmember took issue with the idea that restricting funding from contractors would prevent corruption or even counter the perception of corruption. This Councilmember further asserted that pay-to-play contracting simply "does not exist" in the District. He challenged the public witnesses and his colleagues to name a specific instance in the history of District politics in which an elected official had awarded a contract based on campaign contributions or "shaken down" a contractor for campaign contributions in return for a contract. He stated that the bills under consideration, and specifically, the pay-to-pay provisions, are perhaps required in other places like New York City, but these kinds of laws are not necessary in the District.

Chairperson Allen responded that, in the Council's recent history, there have been three Councilmembers who have had either lost their committee, had their committee's jurisdiction modified, or been reprimanded or censured for conduct directly related to campaign finance violations, unlawful gifts or arrangements, and conflicts relating to contracting. Attorney General Racine also testified in support of the bills, stating that the public has an "extraordinarily powerful perception" that elected officials have a unique ability to influence the direction of a contract, whether true or not.[21] He stated that perception alone does, in fact, require action – action that is reasonable and constitutional, such as the legislation under consideration at the hearing.

The Committee agrees that the Council's significant oversight role in the contracting process – approving multi-year contracts and those worth more than $1 million – creates the perception of and the opportunity for favoritism toward political supporters. Campaign contributions from potential contractors to those public officials responsible for awarding contracts also has the potential to unduly influence the government contracting process.

In addition, the Council's role in granting tax abatements has come under scrutiny. In December 2017, the Washington City Paper reported on a tax abatement proposal for the development of a parking lot owned by the Supreme Council of Scottish Rite Freemasonry of the Southern District of the United States that had been introduced by a Councilmember.[22] The article asserted that the project was being pushed by political donors and lobbyists "familiar with the Wilson Building".[23] While no campaign finance violations were alleged or investigation conducted, the article raised a perception of corruption among some members of the public, concluding that "whatever the projects' merits, to some residents the prospective subsidies seem like new iterations of D.C.'s age-old pay-to-play culture that rewards special interests at taxpayers' expense".[24]

The Council is not the only government entity involved in government contracting – the Executive plays an even more involved role. One recent alleged pay-to-play incident involved the handling of two contracts awarded by the Department of General Services ("DGS") to Fort Myer Construction and personnel actions taken in response to those awards.[25] In September 2016, in response to public concern and several media stories, the Committee on Transportation and Environment opened an investigation into the circumstances surrounding how the contracts were evaluated and awarded, as well as the reasons for the personnel actions.[26] The Committee heard more than twenty hours of testimony and conducted numerous interviews, resulting in a report titled, "Findings and Recommendations of Mary M. Cheh on the Department of General Services Contracting and Personnel Management".[27]

The report found that, although there was no direct evidence of political influence or motivation, there was evidence that Fort Myer was a favored District contractor and that senior executive officials acted with the intent of benefiting Fort Myer.[28] The report noted that Fort Myer plays a major role in the District as a campaign contributor and has contributed to numerous District officials, including Councilmembers and the last three Mayors.[29] It also found that the perception that the contractor is favored by the District government exists among other contractors, citing testimony that other contractors regularly abstained from bidding on contracts if Fort Myer was a competitor.[30] As a result of its findings, the Committee recommended that the Council should take action to regulate campaign contributions by contractors, noting that "where impressions of favoritism cause contractors to refrain from bidding on particular contracts, the lack of competition means that the District loses out – on price, work quality, and engagement of local workers or businesses."[31]

ii. Other Jurisdictions

At least seventeen states, the federal government, the Securities Exchange Commission, the Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board, and numerous cities, including New York City and Los Angeles, have implemented some form of pay-to-play restrictions.[32] Examples of states that have particularly robust regulations include Connecticut, Illinois, and New Jersey, as discussed in more detail below. Each state takes a slightly different approach with the goal of limiting government contractors' influence in the election and performance of state officials.

In Connecticut, covered individuals in the contracting entity may not make contributions during the contract period (from the negotiation to the December 31st after the termination of the contract).[33] Board members, officers, managers, those with at least 5% ownership interest, and spouses and children are subject to this restriction.[34] The penalty for violation is the cancellation of the government contract and a suspension for one year, as well as fines for violating election law.[35] The regulation applies to both no-bid and competitive contracts with a value of $50,000 or more for a single contract or $100,000 for all contracts – and applies to all state candidates and state and local party committees.[36]

In Illinois, covered individuals in the contracting entity may not make a contribution during the contract period and two years after the termination of the contract.[37] All members of the contracting entity with at least 7.5% controlling interest; officers; spouses; minors; subsidiaries; and nonprofits are subject to the restriction.[38] The restriction applies to both no-bid and competitive contracts with a value of $50,000 in aggregate annual state contracts.[39] It also applies to state candidates and officials responsible for awarding contracts, in addition to their political committees.[40] The penalty for violation is immediate cancellation of the contract, payment of money to the state, loss of all state contracts, and the entity cannot bid for new contracts for three years.[41] The entity's name is also publicly-listed as a violator.[42]

In New Jersey, covered individuals within the contracting entity are restricted to contributions of $300 per election from eighteen months prior to the award of the contract to the termination of the contract.[43] All principals with 10% ownership interest; spouses of individual contractors; and subsidiaries controlled by the entity are subject to the restriction.[44] The restriction applies to both no-bid and competitive contracts with a value of $17,500 or more (except highway contracts and eminent domain).[45] It also applies to gubernatorial candidates and state and county party committees.[46] The penalty for violation is that contractors are liable for up to the value of the contract and are banned from government contracts for five years.[47]

There are also strong pay-to-play restrictions at the federal level. In 1994, the Securities Exchange Commission ("SEC") approved one of the first effective pay-to-play restrictions in the nation, which effectively banned campaign contributions from bond dealers to municipal officials responsible for awarding government contracts to handle municipal securities.[48] The SEC concluded that these pay-to-play practices cost taxpayers money by "fostering a selection process that excludes those firms that do not make contributions, causes less qualified [contractors] to be retained, and undermines equitable practices in the municipal securities industry."[49] Congress has also recognized the potential for corruption inherent in pay-to-play practices by passing legislation to prohibit federal contractors from making certain contributions or expenditures directly to a candidate or political party, or for any political purpose.[50]

In addition, New York City has enacted city-wide restrictions, which regulate contributions from entities "doing business" with the city through a database called the "Doing Business Database".[51] This publicly-accessible database lists individuals and their associated entities who are doing business with the city government. New York City's law is expansive and covers persons who have received or are seeking contracts, franchises, concessions, grants, pension fund investment contracts, economic development agreements, real property agreements, or land use actions with the city. The regulations apply to the following individuals associated with entities doing business: Chief Executive Officer or equivalent, Chief Operating Officer or equivalent, Chief Financial Officer or equivalent, anyone who owns or controls more than 10% of the entity, senior managers who have high-level supervisory capacity in which substantial discretion and oversight is exercised in business transactions with the city, and registered lobbyists. Contributions from anyone in the database are not matched with public funds (for public financing purposes) and are subject to lower contribution limits varying by office.[52]

iii. Constitutionality

Courts have generally been protective of efforts to preserve the integrity of the government contracting process through the enactment of pay-to-play laws, recognizing the special risk of corruption that certain types of contributions pose. In 2010, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit upheld Connecticut's law restricting contractor contributions to state officials.[53] The challenged provisions of Connecticut's law prohibit state contractors and certain lobbyists from (1) making campaign contributions to candidates for state office, and (2) soliciting campaign contributions on behalf of candidates for state office.[54] The Court found that the ban on contractor contributions "unequivocally addresses the perception of corruption" by "totally shutting off the flow of money from contractors to state officials" and eliminating the influence contractors hold over state officials through campaign contributions.[55] As a result, in light of the state's corruption scandals involving state contractors, the Court held that the outright ban on contributions by contractors, prospective contractors, and their principals was "closely drawn to meet the state's interest in combating corruption and the appearance of corruption".[56]

In 2015, a unanimous en banc U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit upheld the federal contractor contribution ban, which bars contractors from contributing "directly or indirectly" to federal candidates, political parties, or PACs, concluding that "the contracting context greatly sharpens the risk of corruption and its appearance."[57] The Court recognized two governmental interests sufficient to justify the ban: (1) preventing the actuality and appearance of corruption, and (2) preventing "interference with merit-based public administration" to ensure that contracting "depend[s] upon meritorious performance rather than political service".[58]

The Second Circuit has also upheld New York City's regulation of contributions from entities "doing business" with the city.[59] The law is expansive, covering persons who have received or are seeking contracts, franchises, concessions, grants, pension fund investment contracts, economic development agreements, or land use actions with the city.[60]

An outlier to these favorable cases is Colorado's pay-to-play constitutional amendment, which was invalidated by the Colorado Supreme Court in 2010 as overly broad – it applied to collective bargaining agreements as well as government contracts and prohibited any business or union that made a contribution to a local candidate from qualifying for a state government contract – neither of which restriction is present in the Committee Print.[61]

iv. Committee Print

The Committee agrees with testimony from public witnesses and subject-matter experts, including Public Citizen, the Brennan Center, and the Campaign Legal Center, that pay-to-play reforms are critical for the District to maintain confidence in the integrity of the government contracting process. Pay-to-play contracting does not usually take the form of outright bribery, but rather more likely involves the contractor buying access for consideration of a government contract. This not only damages the integrity of the contracting process, but it undermines the public's confidence in government. The Committee Print takes strides to separate campaign contributions from government contracts and rebuild public confidence in the integrity of both the District's government contracting process and its elections.

Definitions

The Committee Print bars the District from entering into a "contract" with a "covered contractor" if the covered contractor contributes to a "prohibited recipient" within the "prohibited period". The following are important definitions for purposes of this section:

1. "Contract" = agreements with an aggregate value of $250,000 or more, including the value of any option period or similar contract extension or modification, for:

    a. The rendition of services;
    b. The furnishing of any goods, materials, supplies, or equipment;
    c. The construction, alteration or repair of any District government-owned or District government-leased property;
    d. The acquisition, sale, lease, surplus, or disposition of any land or building;
    e. A licensing arrangement;
    f. A tax exemption or abatement; or [61] Dallman v. Ritter, 225 P.3d 610 (Colo. 2010) (holding that the state's entire pay-to-play constitutional amendment was invalid on several grounds, including that the amendment violated free speech rights and the language was unconstitutionally vague and overbroad).

g. A loan or loan guarantee, not including loans made for other than commercial purposes, such as educational loans or residential mortgage loans.

The Committee reviewed pay-to-play statutes from other jurisdictions and concluded that the types of legal relationships above were either commonly included in the definition of a "contract" or should be due to specific experiences in the District. The Committee Print's definition of "contract" is broad because the Committee believes that the threat of influence in a relationship between government officials and those doing business with the District extends beyond traditional contracts for goods or services. For example, as discussed supra, the Council plays an important role in granting tax abatements or exemptions by introducing the necessary legislation. As a result, Councilmembers are vulnerable to criticism of pay-to-play practices when it is revealed that the same Councilmembers introducing the legislation have accepted campaign contributions from the developers or lobbyists who stand to benefit from the tax abatement or exemption. Similarly, the Council is responsible for moving legislation to approve a surplus or disposition of District property, and therefore Councilmembers run the risk of similar allegations of pay-to-play as they do with tax abatements and exemptions.

The Committee also settled on a threshold value of $250,000 for a contract, including any option years or modifications associated with that contract. The campaign finance bills pending in Committee similarly included different definitions and contract values. Councilmember Gray and Attorney General Racine's bills notably included grants; the former set a threshold value of $250,000, and the latter of $100,000. Chairman Mendelson's pay-to-play proposal was only for contracts for goods or services, and the contract value was $100,000. The Committee carefully considered the contract value and concluded that $100,000 was too low a threshold and would capture too many contracts where the potential financial benefit to the contractor is negligible. A simple search of the Office of Contracting and Procurement's Awarded Contracts Database[62] lists 268 contract awards with a value of between $25,000 and $50,000, and another 750 contracts with a value between $50,001 and $100,000.

2. "Covered contractor" = any business entity,[63] including its principals, seeking or holding a contract or multiple contracts with an aggregate value of $250,000 or more with the District government.

The Committee Print's definition of the contractors that are covered by the bill includes "principals" of the contractor, as do many other jurisdictions. "Principals" are defined as senior officers of that business entity, such as president, executive director, chief executive officer, chief operating officer, or chief financial officer. If a business entity is an educational institution, "principal" does not include deans of that "business entity" – this exemption is to enable, for example, large educational institutions not to foreclose all contracting opportunities with the District in excess of $250,000 just because one dean of, for example, that educational institution's business school, contributes $50 to a candidate for Mayor. The Committee purposely does not include boards of directors in this definition, reasoning that such a restriction would inhibit potential board members from serving on the District's many non-profit boards.

[62] See, http://app.ocp.dc.gov/RUI/information/award/search.asp (accessed October 15, 2018).

[63] Under D.C. Official Code § 1-1161.01(4), "business entity" means "any corporation, partnership, sole proprietorship, firm, nonprofit corporation, enterprise, franchise, association, organization, self-employed individual, holding company, joint stock, trust, and any legal entity through which business is conducted, whether for profit or not."

The Committee Print relies on contracting authorities to have contractors self-report their principals at the time that they seek a contract with the District, and the District's contracting authorities will be responsible for ensuring compliance with this requirement and updating submitted information as necessary. Some jurisdictions and the other bills pending in the Committee[64] would go deeper into the contractor's leadership structure, and sometimes include related entities and immediate family members of the contractor and its leadership. While the Committee anticipates that there could be situations in which contractors attempt to skirt the contribution restrictions by having their immediate family members or their leadership team contribute in lieu of their own contribution,[65] at this juncture, the Committee felt more comfortable in this first legislative bite at the pay-to-play apple with only regulating principals' contributions. The logistical and technological implementation of the Committee Print will already be extensive with only the listed principals included, and if the definition were extended deeper into a business entity's leadership structure, or to related parties or immediately family members, the list of covered contractors could number in the hundreds of thousands. Such an extensive regime would be doomed to fail administratively – for example, it would be impractical for the domestic partner of the spouse of a covered contractor to know of the restrictions imposed on their contributions or the potential harm to the contractor caused by even a small contribution.

3. "Prohibited recipient" =

   a. If the covered contractor is seeking or holding a contract with, or for which the procurement process would be overseen by, a District agency subordinate to the Mayor: the Mayor; any candidate for Mayor; any political committee affiliated with the Mayor or a candidate for Mayor; and any constituent-service program affiliated with the Mayor.

   b. If the covered contractor is seeking or holding a contract with the Office of the Attorney General: the Attorney General; any candidate for Attorney General; and any political committee affiliated with the Attorney General or a candidate for Attorney General.

[64] Councilmember Gray's proposed legislation would have included "related parties" and would have limited the contributions of a covered contractor's immediate family members to $300 per person per election. Chairman Mendelson's legislation similarly would have included "business contributors" as covered contractors; this would have included a business entity making a contribution and all of that entity's affiliated entities.

[65] For example, in the case of Jeffrey Thompson and the federal investigation into political corruption – Thompson's longtime associate Jeanne Clarke Harris pleaded guilty to felony charges of funneling funds from businesses owned by a co-conspirator. These funds went to family members and friends who then made contributions to political candidates, adding up to $653,000 in spending not reported to government regulators as required by law. Thompson pleaded guilty to funneling more than $2 million in illegal contributions to campaigns. See, Mike DeBonis, Who is Jeffrey Thompson?, WASH. POST (March 20, 2014), available at https://www.washingtonpost.com/local/dc-politics/who-is-jeffrey-thompson/2014/03/10/66abce0c-99a8-11e3-80ac-63a8ba7f7942_story.html?utm_term=.8178fb857f1f.

c. If the covered contractor is seeking or holding a contract that must either come before the Council for its approval or which otherwise must be approved by the Council legislatively to take effect (such as tax abatements or exemptions, or surpluses and dispositions of District property): any Councilmember; any candidate for Councilmember; any political committee affiliated with a Councilmember or a candidate for Councilmember; and any constituent-service program affiliated with a Councilmember.

In the Committee Print, "prohibited recipients" – those public officials and their affiliated political committees and constituent-service programs to which covered contractors may not contribute during a "prohibited period" – differ depending on the mechanism by which the contract would be procured or approved. Although the details may appear complicated, the principle is simple: a covered contractor cannot contribute to the public official who has or could have (because the public official is a candidate for that office) the responsibility for overseeing the procurement or approval.

If the contract would be held or procured by a District agency or instrumentality subordinate to the Mayor, the prohibited recipient would be the Mayor or a candidate for Mayor.[66] This will capture the vast majority of contracts, as the Office of Contracting and Procurement ("OCP") and the independent – but subordinate – procurement authorities handle most contracting and procurement.[67] It is also possible that an agency independent from the Mayor would use a subordinate procurement authority – as in the Board of Elections using OCP's services to contract for a new voter database – in which case, although the contract itself is with an independent agency not subordinate to the Mayor (therefore, no potential to garner influence by a covered contractor contributing to the Mayor), the authority which reviews the contract is subordinate, and therefore contributions should not flow to the public official who oversees that authority – in this case, the Mayor. "Prohibited recipient" is similar for the Office of the Attorney General, although those contracts are likely few and far between. Councilmembers, their affiliated political committees, and their constituent-service programs would be "prohibited recipients" if the contract could come before the Council, i.e. it is a multi-year contract, its value is over $1,000,000, or it originates in legislation and has a value of $250,000 or more, such as a surplus or disposition of District property or a tax abatement or exemption.

The Committee Print notably does not bar prohibited recipients from accepting such contributions; rather, the onus is on the contracting authority and the covered contractor. The Committee requires OCP – which already maintains a publicly-accessible database that captures many of the contracts under the bill – to work collaboratively with the CFB to prevent improper contract awards. It is unnecessary, therefore, for campaigns – which are often run on a shoestring budget with all volunteers – to be required to doublecheck one or more databases to identify, for each contribution, whether the contributor is a covered contractor. With that said, the Committee Print does require each contracting authority to maintain a publicly-accessible list of covered contractors for that authority on its website, and the new CFB will check contributions against this information.

[66] "Public official" in D.C. Official Code § 1-1161.01(47) also includes candidates.

In the case that the prohibited recipient is a Councilmember, the Committee Print also requires bids or applications for proposed contracts submitted to the Council to contain a summary including the names of the contractor's principals, a description of any other contracts the proposed contractor is currently seeking or holds with the District, and a certification that the proposed contractor has been determined not to be in violation of the bill's pay-to-play provisions.

4. "Prohibited period" =

    a. If the "contract" is for the rendition of services; the furnishing of any goods, materials, supplies, or equipment; the construction, alteration, or repair of any District government-owned or District government-leased property; or the acquisition or sale of any land or building;

        i. From the date of the solicitation or similar invitation or opportunity to contract to:

            1. If the contractor's response is unsuccessful, the termination of negotiations or notification by the District that the covered contractor's response was unsuccessful; or
            2. If the covered contractor's response is successful, one year after the termination of the contract;

    b. If the "contract" is a lease, licensing arrangement, or loan or loan guarantee:

        i. From the date of the solicitation or similar invitation or opportunity to contract to:

            1. If the covered contractor's response is unsuccessful, the termination of negotiations or notification by the District that the covered contractor's response was unsuccessful; or
            2. If the covered contractor's response is successful, one year after the entrance into the contract;

    c. If the "contract" is a surplus or disposition of any land or building:

        i. From the date of the solicitation or similar invitation or opportunity to contract to:

            1. If the covered contractor's response is unsuccessful before the introduction of legislation before the Council, the termination of negotiations or notification by the District that the covered contractor's response was unsuccessful; or

2. If the covered contractor's response is successful and legislation is introduced before the Council:
    a. If the legislation is pending, the end of that Council period; or
    b. If the legislation passes, one year after the effective date of the legislation;

d. If the "contract" is a tax abatement or exemption:

    i. From the introduction of legislation before the Council, or the inclusion of such in a contract in pending legislation, to:

        1. If the legislation is pending before the Council, the end of that Council Period; or
        2. If the legislation passes, one year after the effective date of the legislation.

The prohibited periods will differ depending on the type of contract, but again, the principle is simple: a covered contractor should not be contributing while they are actively seeking or holding a contract. "Actively seeking" will also differ depending upon the type of contract, and the Committee will look to the contracting authorities for guidance on that definition.

Enforcement

Implementation and enforcement of the Committee Print's pay-to-play provisions will be a significant and complicated task, and the Committee is therefore delaying the applicability of these provisions until November 4, 2020, to provide sufficient time for the various contracting authorities and the CFB to prepare for the rollout. The most important component is a database accessible to all parties, including the public, that provides an active and searchable list of covered contractors (and their principals), active contracts, and prohibited recipients, similar to New York City's Doing Business Database. The public and campaigns must be able to easily access up-to-date information, and prospective and current contractors must be aware before bidding on contracts and during their period of performance. The Committee's intent is also not to penalize campaigns for non-compliance with this new regime, and it will be imperative to build in time before the law is effective to account for a robust educational component for all parties – particularly as the Fair Elections Program will become effective not three weeks from the date of this report.

To facilitate implementation and enforcement, the Committee Print requires each contracting authority to maintain a publicly-available list of all covered contractors, including principals, for the contracts of that contracting authority. Each contracting authority will be responsible for notifying covered contractors of prohibited recipients for each contract (as well as likely prohibited recipients, based on the estimated value). Contract authorities will also work with the CFB to identify, for each covered contractor, whether they have contributed to a prohibited recipient during the prohibited period.

The Committee Print mandates that the website established by the Chief Procurement Officer (of OCP) provide clear instructions on how to respond electronically or non-electronically to each solicitation, include information about the prohibited recipients or likely prohibited recipients for each contract, and include the pay-to-play provisions of this Print. Moreover, the Committee Print requires that OCP's existing database containing information regarding each contract executed by the District for an amount equal to or greater than $100,000 must contain a notation identifying whether the vendor is a covered contractor and to which public officials the vendor is prohibited from making campaign contributions and during what prohibited period.

In addition, because the definition of contract includes tax exemptions and abatements that would come before the Council, the Committee Print amends the District's tax abatement financial analysis ("TAFA") requirements to require that, if the estimated aggregate value of the exemption or abatement is $250,000 or more, TAFAs – analyses prepared by the Office of the Chief Financial Officer for tax exemptions and abatements pending before the Council – must include a list of the contributions made, from the date of the bill's introduction to the date of the TAFA, by the grantee of the exemption or abatement and the principals of the grantee, to the Mayor, any Councilmember, or any candidate for Mayor or Councilmember; any political committee affiliated with the Mayor, Councilmembers, or candidates for those offices; and any constituent-service program affiliated with the Mayor, Councilmembers, or candidates for those offices. The Print also requires TAFAs to include a list provided by the grantee of any contracts that the grantee is seeking or holds with the District government.

Penalties

The Committee Print includes several new remedies exclusively for its pay-to-play provisions. A contractor who violates the Committee Print's pay-to-play provisions may be considered to have breached the terms of any existing contract with the District, and, at the discretion of the contracting authority, the contract may be terminated. The contractor may also be disqualified from eligibility from future District contracts for the period of four years from the date of violation. In addition, the names of violators (both prohibited recipients and covered contractors) must be prominently displayed on the CFB's website.

3. Limiting the Influence of Money as a Corrupting Force in District Politics

In addition to restricting contributions by government contractors, the Committee Print seeks to limit the influence of money in politics through several reforms: by (1) prohibiting bundling by lobbyists to principal campaign committees, exploratory committees, inaugural committees, transition committees, and legal defense committees; (2) requiring that campaign debt be retired within a certain period and limiting the repayment of personal loans; (3) clarifying legal defense committees; (4) limiting contributions to inaugural and legal defense committees; (5) applying contribution limits to PACs in non-election years; and (6) reforming constituent-service programs (also known as constituent services funds).

i. Lobbyist Bundling

> The role of a lobbyist is both legitimate and important to legislation and government decisionmaking, but by its very nature, it is prone to corruption and therefore especially susceptible to public suspicion of corruption. Any payment made by a lobbyist to a public official, whether a campaign contribution or simply a gift, calls into question the propriety of the relationship...[68] [emphasis in original].

Bundling means to "forward or arrange to forward two or more contributions from one or more persons by a person who is not acting with actual authority as an agent or principal of a committee."[69] Put more simply, bundling by lobbyists is a way of aggregating influence with elected officials through coordinated fundraising. Rather than contributing once as an individual, lobbyists can bundle contributions to flex their political muscle to public officials on behalf of their employers. In the District, benefits from bundling could take the form of a meeting being scheduled more quickly than it would be for an ordinary resident, facetime with a public official, an appointment to a board or commission, or a beneficial decision for the lobbyist's employer.

Under current law, lobbyists must disclose any bundling of contributions on their bi-annual activity reports submitted to BEGA,[70] but the Committee is unaware of any such disclosures to date.[71] Although meaningful, the disclosure provisions passed in the Council's most recent campaign finance reform omnibus legislation – the Campaign Finance Reform and Transparency Amendment Act of 2013 – did not enhance transparency in the end, in part due to the method by which lobbyist activity reports have been published on BEGA's website as thousands of individual pdfs. In fact, the Committee at the time stated that "...disclosure of bundled contributions is meaningless without the capability to effectively and efficiently conduct a search of filed Activity Reports on BEGA's website".[72] But more importantly, disclosure by itself did not address the District's underlying interest in reducing the perception or actuality of corruption.

In the District, lobbyists are not limited in their ability to bundle,[73] although a number of other jurisdictions have done so. Connecticut prohibits lobbyists from bundling contributions on behalf of executive and legislative branch candidates.[74] In North Carolina, lobbyists are prohibited from bundling contributions for legislators or candidates running for office.[75] That state goes a step further and prohibits lobbyists from making contributions to members of the state legislature while the state legislature is in regular session.[76] The Committee Print does not similarly bar lobbyists from making contributions, but it does prohibit bundling by lobbyists to principal campaign committees, exploratory committees, inaugural committees, transition committees, and legal defense committees. The Committee Print does not limit bundling to PACs,[77] as PACs are definitionally unaffiliated with candidates (unlike the restricted committees), so the same ability to influence a public official through a contribution does not exist.

ii. Retiring Campaign Debt and Limiting Personal Loans by Candidates

Under current law, there is no requirement that principal campaign committees close out their campaign debt within a certain time frame. As a result, many committees remain open for years, even more than a decade, after an election. Some candidates who have been successful in their races have continued to fundraise once in office to retire their campaign debts. District law permits this practice, providing that contributions made to retire debts are subject to the same contribution limits for that office (even if made after the election), the amount and nature of the debts owed must be continuously reported until extinguished, and committee fund balances may be used to retire the committee's debts.[78] As of the date of this report, there are seventeen open committees due to unpaid debt, and five committees pending approval for termination.[79] The oldest open committee is Orange for Mayor, opened on June 24, 2005, which still carries $97,500 worth of debt.[80]

Campaigns frequently maintain debt post-election, but unless they are in the process of winding down or resolving a pending campaign finance audit, they have overextended if they have debt outstanding for a significant period. Large debts are particularly troubling if the candidate won their election and then fundraises on that debt while in office.[81] Contributions to candidates, [77] Councilmember Gray's bill had proposed restricting lobbyist bundling to political committees, PACs, and IECs, but not bundling to political committees and PACs for initiatives and referenda.

[78] Unlike principal campaign committees, there are limits on other types of committees. Exploratory committees cannot exceed eighteen months, after which they must transfer the fund balance to a principal campaign committee, political committee, or nonprofit organization. D.C. Inaugural committees must terminate no later than 45 days from the beginning of the term of the new Mayor, but they may continue to accept contributions to retire their debts. D.C. [80] Id.

[81] For example, during his 2014 campaign for Attorney General, Karl Racine loaned his campaign $451,000. After his election, he fundraised to pay himself back some of the funds, which is legal under current law. Martin Austermuhle, Racine, Champion of Campaign Finance Reform, Faces Some Issues of His Own, WAMU (Sept. 12, 2017), available at https://wamu.org/story/17/09/12/racine-champion-campaign-finance-reform-faces-issues/.

if given to garner influence, are at least speculative, but once that candidate becomes a public official, the official now has business before them and a host of conflicts – in other words, there are more strings attached post-election. The potential for corruption is all the more significant when the debt owed to the candidate or public official is to repay a personal loan. In a recent WAMU article, Adav Noti, an attorney with the Campaign Legal Center, notes: "There's always at minimum an optical concern with officeholders soliciting funds from, among others, the people they regulate. That concern can be heightened when the funds that are being solicited are used to pay back a loan that the office holder made to their campaign."[82]

The Committee Print therefore amends current law by requiring that any excess campaign funds used to retire debts of committees be used for that purpose within certain timeframes or personal liability will be invoked. For principal campaign committees, debts must be retired within six months following the election or they become liabilities to the public official. For inaugural and transition committees, candidates now have six months after the beginning of the term of the new Mayor (for inaugural committees) or the new Mayor, Chairman, or Attorney General (for transition committees) in which to repay debts using campaign funds. Candidates are prohibited from fundraising to retire these debts after six months. In addition, the Committee Print allows excess campaign funds to be used to repay personal loans by a candidate to their political committee only up to $25,000. The Committee believes that this measure helps level the playing field for candidates who do not have vast personal wealth at their disposal to loan their own campaigns, and the new limit will also discourage public officials from fundraising on large personal loans while in office.

Federal and state requirements for the retirement of campaign debt, and specifically personal loans to the campaign from the candidate, differ from the District. Federal law requires that for personal loans that, in the aggregate, exceed $250,000, the committee may (1) repay the entire amount of the loans using contributions if those contributions were made on the day of the election or before; and (2) repay only up to $250,000 of the loans from contributions made after the election.[83] If the committee uses its cash on hand after the election to repay all or part of the personal loans over $250,000, it must do so within twenty days.[84] Several states and municipalities impose restrictions: Washington State goes farther than the Committee Print in limiting the repayment of personal loans to the candidate to $5,500, indexed to inflation;[85] Alabama permits contributions to retire debt in a 120-day post-election window but does not require that cash on hand be used for that purpose; [86] Georgia mirrors federal law, setting a cap on the repayment of personal loans at $250,000 post-election;[87] and Illinois takes a different approach, permitting unlimited loans to the committee, but the candidate becomes "self-funded" if, during the twelve months prior to the election, the candidate and associates loan a certain amount, thereby causing the contribution limits for all candidates to be waived.[88]

Several cities also impose restrictions: in Houston, Texas, a candidate cannot be reimbursed for personal loans to their campaign in excess of $75,000 for Mayor or city-wide offices, or $50,000 for a district council office.[89] In Berkeley, California, candidate-controlled committees may receive contributions designated for a prior cumulative period only to help retire a campaign debt,[90] and the contributor must not have contributed the maximum of $250 during that earlier period. Candidate-controlled committees may only receive such contributions until the end of the second semi-annual filing period (i.e., December 31) in the next even-numbered year after the prior election.[91] For example, where a candidate-controlled committee has campaign debts remaining from the November 2014 election, it is prohibited from accepting contributions to retire this debt after December 31, 2016.[92] In New York City, loans from the candidate or from anyone else have to be repaid by the date of the election or they become contributions, subject to contribution limits.[93] Candidates who participate in the city's public financing program are allowed to contribute three times the contribution limit to their own campaign.[94]

iii. Reforming Legal Defense Committees

A legal defense committee is "a person or group of persons organized for the purpose of soliciting, accepting, and spending funds to defray the professional fees and costs for a public official's legal defense to one or more civil, criminal, or administrative proceedings."[95] To the Committee's knowledge, such a committee has never been created in the District. The Committee Print makes a minor amendment by allowing public officials to maintain legal defense committees only for the purpose of defraying attorney's fees and other related costs for the official's legal defense to one or more civil, criminal, or administrative proceedings arising directly out of the conduct of a campaign, the election process, or the performance of the public official's governmental activities and duties. The Print thus clarifies that these committees may only be used for the public official's legal defense in actions that are directly related to the public official's status as a public official. This is in keeping with best practices in a number of states, including Connecticut, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nevada, North Carolina, Oregon, and Wisconsin.[96] Los Angeles, San Diego, and San Jose also provide for legal defense committees.[97]

iv. Limiting Contributions to Inaugural and Legal Defense Committees

Current law sets the limits for individual contributions to inaugural[98] and legal defense committees[99] at $10,000 per individual. These limits are significantly higher than the limits to exploratory committees[100] – $2,000 for Mayor, $1,500 for Council Chairman and Attorney General, $1,000 for at-large Councilmember, $500 for Ward Councilmember or At-Large State Board of Education Member, and $200 for Ward State Board of Education member – and transition committees – $2,000 for Mayor and $1,000 for Council Chairman in the aggregate.[101] The Committee Print brings the outsized limits for inaugural and legal defense committees in line with the others listed by capping them both at $2,000 per person.

v. Applying Contribution Limits to PACs in Non-Election Years

The Committee Print also makes temporary legislation passed by the Council permanent by applying current contribution limitations to PACs during nonelection years.[102] Existing District law does not limit contributions to PACs in nonelection years.[103] In passing the temporary legislation, the Council determined that it was important to implement the same contribution limits during nonelection years to ensure that the activities of PACs are transparent and accountable.[104]

Based on the Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit's reasoning in EMILY's List v. FEC,[105] contributions to a PAC account that is only used for independent expenditures cannot be limited. The Court held that the government cannot restrict independent political spending by nonprofit groups or political committees, and that doing so violates the First Amendment rights of such groups. However, the Committee Print does not run afoul of this ruling by implementing contribution limits on PACs in non-election years. The Committee Print, as discussed more fully infra, allows PACs to create separate "non-contribution accounts" from which they may make unregulated independent expenditures not subject to contribution limits. The contribution limits imposed by both current law and this Print apply only to the accounts of PACs used to make contributions. This is made clear by the Committee in an amendment to D.C. Official Code § 1-1163.33.

vi. Reforming Constituent Service Funds

The Committee notes that the restrictions on constituent-service programs proposed by Chairperson Allen in the draft Committee Print – described in this section of the report – were repealed via an amendment offered at the Committee's October 18, 2018, markup on the legislation. See the Committee Action section of this report for further explanation.

Currently, the Mayor and eight members of the Council maintain constituent-service programs, also known as constituent services funds ("CSFs").[106] CSFs may be used to fund a variety of purposes, including funeral arrangements, emergency housing, past due utility payments, food and refreshments or an in-kind equivalent on infrequent occasions, community events not sponsored by the District government, and community-wide events.[107] All expenditures must accrue to the "primary benefit of residents of the District of Columbia".[108]

CSFs have often been the subject of controversy. For example, one Councilmember recently came under criticism for a CSF contribution to an out-of-District event held by a national organization.[109] Members of the public have also criticized the existence of CSFs. The Washington Post Editorial Board has suggested that CSFs' main purpose is to "make public officials look good" and should be eliminated.[110] The editorial states that many payments from CSFs do not go to actual constituents – rather, "[c]ommon uses include buying program ads or tickets to community group events...[or] to caterers and to consultants".[111] It concludes that CSFs are "second campaign accounts that can be used with broad discretion", noting that "the contributors are the very same entities that underwrite the city's election campaigns – those seeking access and city business...".[112]

Given the criticism and concerns surrounding CSFs, the Committee Print clarifies that CSFs must only be used for an activity, services, or program that directly provides services to District residents. It also adds a new disallowable expenditure for CSFs: year-long or season admissions to theatrical, sporting, or cultural events. The Committee Print further prohibits excess funds in certain political committees from being rolled over into CSFs.

4. Addressing Improper Coordination Between Public Officials and PACs and IECs associations.[113] The Court ruled that political spending is a form of protected free speech, and thus, while direct contributions may be limited due to a risk of corruption, independent spending may not be limited.[114] This landmark decision has allowed unfettered money to flow into American elections, mostly from the super-wealthy.

The Court's decision in Citizens United rested on a critical assumption – that unlimited spending should happen independent of candidates, in other words, not in coordination with candidates.[115] The Court continues to recognize that coordinated spending can be corrupting, and, therefore, it is subject to reasonable limits.[116] The problem is that, in reality, outside spenders often work with candidates who have incentives to protect the spenders' interests once elected. This occurs both on the federal level, e.g., with prominent spenders like the Koch brothers, and at the state and local level. For example, candidates' trusted associates have organized IECs and PACs to amass funds.[117] Candidates have fundraised for these affiliated, yet unrestricted, groups.[118] Campaigns and outside groups also have found ways to collaborate in their messaging and use a common roster of strategists and other providers.[119]

While is important to acknowledge that stronger coordination regulation is not a cure-all for the structural problems caused by the outsized influence of wealthy interests in our elections, strong and well-enforced anti-coordination laws can make a meaningful difference in safeguarding election integrity. Coordination regulation prevents end runs around direct contribution limits, which are meant to minimize the opportunity for quid pro quo corruption. This kind of regulation identifies coordinated spending that should be subject to disclosure or contribution limits. In addition, anti-coordination provisions can encourage candidates to opt into public financing programs without fear of unfair competition from candidates with connected, unlimited spenders.

i. Other Jurisdictions

Generally, state laws treat contributions or expenditures as coordinated if they are based on "substantial discussion" between the spender and candidate. This standard does not adequately capture the many ways in which collaboration occurs. According to a report by the Brennan Center, in most states, laws meant to deter coordinated spending are too ambiguous, narrow, or weakly enforced.[120] The Brennan Center report found that California, Connecticut, Maine, and Minnesota have the strongest state anti-coordination laws.[121] California's law includes a presumption of coordination if the outside spender uses any provider who has provided the relevant candidate's campaign with political or fundraising strategy in the same election.[122] Similarly, Maine's law presumes coordination if a spender and candidate use the same strategists or staff.[123] Connecticut's law, which also includes a presumption of coordination, broadly defines the type of spending subject to regulation: any expenditure that is made in coordination with a candidate, where expenditure means any payment made to promote the success or defeat of a candidate.[124] Minnesota requires that all steps leading up to a political communication, including "fundraising, budgeting decisions, media design . . . production, and distribution," be independent of the candidate, and interprets the law as requiring the highest degree of separation between candidates and outside spenders.[125] All of these states also have active regulatory agencies and provide detailed guidance about what constitutes coordination.[126]

The Brennan Center report also notes that federal coordination regulation is moderately strong and defines coordination as "substantial discussion" or greater involvement between the candidate and the spender, spending based on a candidate's suggestion, the involvement of a former employee of the candidates or a consultant who also works for the candidate within a certain time, and re-publication of the candidate's materials by the spender.[127] However, the Federal Elections Commission has notoriously failed to enforce coordination rules since the mid-2000s – rendering the regulations ineffective.[128]

ii. Current Law and Hearing Testimony

Currently, District law prohibits coordination, defined as: "(A) At the request or suggestion of a candidate or public official, a political committee affiliated with a candidate or public official, or an agent of a candidate or public official or of a political committee affiliated with the candidate or public official; or (B) With the material involvement of a candidate or public official, a political committee affiliated with a candidate or public official, or an agent of a candidate or public official or of a political committee affiliated with a candidate or public official."[129] Although coordination is prohibited, the prohibition is not as expansive or clear as it should be, and it does not cover many real-world scenarios where candidates fundraise for PACs or provide PACs with former senior staff from their campaigns. It is also not clear from existing provisions that coordinated spending must be treated as a contribution for purposes of contribution limits and disclosure. OCF's enforcement of the existing coordination restrictions, to the Committee's knowledge, is limited.

Witnesses at the Committee's hearing expressed dissatisfaction with the District's coordination laws, particularly relating to independent expenditures. Several testified that the District must ensure that independent expenditures are truly independent from candidates, public officials, and their campaigns by enhancing anti-coordination laws. Witnesses from the Brennan Center and the Campaign Legal Center recommended that the Committee create a rebuttable presumption of coordination if certain factors are present, similar to the Attorney General's proposal.[130] Witnesses also testified in support of clarifying that any expenditure coordinated with a candidate's campaign should be treated as a contribution, and requiring outside spending groups like IECs to certify that they have not coordinated with a campaign.

iii. Committee Print

The Committee Print includes several targeted, commonsense provisions to prevent coordination between candidates and PACs and IECs. First, it strengthens and clarifies the definition of "coordination" by including actions made at the explicit or implicit direction, request, or suggestion of a public official, affiliated committee, or their agent, or in cooperation, consultation, or concert with, or with the other material involvement[131] of a public official, their affiliated committee, or their agent.

The Committee Print further builds on the best practices and language of other jurisdictions, in addition to the proposals in Councilmember Silverman's and Attorney General Racine's bills, by establishing a rebuttable presumption of coordination in certain circumstances. Coordination is presumed if any of the following factors exist:

1) The contribution or expenditure is made based on information that the public official, political committee affiliated with the public official, or an agent of a public official or a political committee affiliated with a public official, provided to the particular person making the contribution or expenditure about its needs or plans, including information about campaign messaging or planned expenditures;[132]

2) The person making the contribution or expenditure retains the professional services of a person who also provides the public official, political committee affiliated with the public official, or an agent of a public official or a political committee affiliated with a public official, with professional services related to campaign or fundraising strategy;[133]

[131] The Committee Print makes minor amendments to the definition of "material involvement": "with respect to a contribution or expenditure, any communication to or from a public official, political committee affiliated with public official, or any agent of a public official or political committee affiliated with a public official, related to the contribution or expenditure. Material involvement includes devising or helping to devise the strategy, content, means of dissemination, or timing of the contribution or expenditure, or making any express or implied solicitation of the contribution or expenditure."

[132] An example of this scenario would be a situation in which the candidate's campaign manager informs an outside spender that the campaign needs polling services, and the outside spender makes expenditures for polling services to benefit the candidate based on this information.

[133] An example of this scenario would be a situation in which a person makes an expenditure for the services of a political strategist to support a candidate, and the candidate has used the same political strategist.

3) The person making the contribution or expenditure is a political committee, political action committee, or independent expenditure committee that was established or is or was staffed in a leadership role by an individual who: (1) works or previously worked in a senior position or in an advisory capacity on the public official's staff or on the public official's principal campaign committee; or (2) who is a member of the public official's immediate family;[134] or

4) The contribution or expenditure is made for the purpose of financing, directly or indirectly, the election of a candidate or a political committee affiliated with that candidate, and that candidate has fundraised for the person making the expenditure.[135]

5. Enhancing Disclosure Requirements and Training

According to a November 2015 poll by the Associated Press, 87 percent of respondents believe that disclosure would be at least somewhat effective at reducing the influence of money in politics.[136] However, increasing transparency is not easy. In the post-Citizens United era, sources of large amounts of money in federal and local politics remain anonymous through independent spending, which is constitutionally unlimited.[137] Specifically, there has been a surge in outside spending on election advertising that is technically independent of candidates.[138] Anonymous political advertising poses a significant risk of misleading voters and unfairly attacking candidates. Such advertisements are effective because viewers have little information to evaluate besides the content of the ad. However, there is evidence that when viewers learn more about an ad's sponsor, they engage in more critical thinking about the ad's message.[139]

Because independent spending is not subject to contribution limits, it is critical for jurisdictions to require extensive disclosure and rigorously enforce these requirements. Strong disclosure rules for outside spenders and enforcement are insufficient to stem the tide of unlimited, unaccountable spending – but smart rules and consequences that incentivize compliance can make a measurable difference in providing voters with information vital to their decision-making and in holding elected officials accountable.[140]

[134] An example of this scenario would be a situation in which a candidate's former campaign manager now runs an independent expenditure committee making expenditures to benefit the candidate.

[135] An example of this scenario would be a situation in which an organization for which a candidate has fundraised makes expenditures to support that candidate.

i. Other Jurisdictions

Many jurisdictions, including the District, require disclosure of donors only by registered political committees or in other limited circumstances that minimally sophisticated donors and spenders can easily dodge. This approach fails to capture how outside spending actually occurs in the post-Citizens United era. States have taken different approaches to addressing the reality of how independent spenders are influencing elections, particularly through advertising – a few of which are discussed below.

In 2014, California enacted disclosure reforms relating to political advertising by independent spenders.[141] The law requires a spender to disclose enough contributions to account for all of its political advertising in a given cycle, even if the spender claims that not all the contributors donated specifically for those ads.[142] California also requires outside spenders to list the top two donors who gave at least $50,000.[143] These changes recognize that groups may give or spend substantial amounts of money for election advertising, even if that is not their primary purpose, and that the public should know as much about these groups' political funding as about political committees' funding.[144]

In Connecticut, political advertisers are required to identify their top five contributors in either a text or spoken disclaimer. If any of the donors listed in that disclaimer are recipients of "covered transfers", the underlying donors making those transfers must be listed in the spender's filings.[145] Washington State takes a similar approach, requiring independent spenders to list their top five contributors.[146]

Federal law requires advertisers to disclose spending and funding for any ad that names a candidate during election season — 60 days before a general election and 30 days before a primary election.[147] Delaware and Montana have embraced the federal model and require outside spenders to disclose funding sources for issue ads that are actually electioneering communications as well as express advocacy. Delaware requires disclosure of all donors to groups that buy these types of ads.[148] Montana's law is more limited and requires disclosure only of donors who earmark their contributions for the electioneering ad in question.[149]

New York City passed a disclosure law that goes one level deeper: instead of only disclosing contributors to an outside spending group, spenders must reveal groups that gave money to those contributors, above a certain threshold.[150] While the law leaves open the possibility that people and groups could pass their money through an extra level of a shell entity, it makes evasion of disclosure laws more difficult. In addition, 2014 amendments to the New York City Charter require that entities contributing to organizations engaging in outside spending disclose "at least one individual who exercises control over the activities of such contributing entity controlling party."[151]

ii. Committee Print

The Committee Print contains several provisions that would strengthen disclosure requirements for independent expenditures in the District. First, the Committee Print requires a certification for an independent expenditure that, to the best of the spender's knowledge, the expenditure wasn't controlled by or coordinated with any public official, political committee affiliated with a public official, or their agents. For non-individuals making independent expenditures, they also must include the names and addresses of each "person" whose total contributions to the reporting "person" is greater than $200 and the date and amount of each contribution, as well as the principal place of business if the "person" is not an individual. These provisions attempt to address what is often called "dark money" on the federal level – those often-untraceable and unlimited expenditures.

Furthermore, the Print enhances disclosure requirements for "political advertising"[152] – including advertising paid for by candidates, political committees, and PACs, as well as by independent spenders. The Print requires that a candidate, political committee, or PAC identify its political advertising by the words "paid for by", followed by the name and address of the candidate or committee and the name of the committee's treasurer. For independent spenders, the Print requires that an independent expenditure committee or person making an independent expenditure identify its political advertising by the words "paid for by", followed by the name and address of the independent expenditure committee and name of the committee's treasurer, or the name and address of the person making the independent expenditure. Advertisements paid for by independent spenders must also include the words "Top Five Contributors", followed by a list of the five largest contributors to the independent expenditure committee or person making the independent expenditure, if applicable, during the twelve-month period before the date of the political advertising. Such disclosure about independent spenders provides viewers access to information that is vital to their ability to evaluate the message contained in the advertisement – and is modeled after disclosure laws in Connecticut and Washington.

The Print also enhances reporting for receipts and expenditures by political committees, PACs, and IECs in several ways. It simplifies the schedule for reporting contributions and expenditures, and the amended reporting dates are as follows: for political committees – in an election year for the office sought, reporting dates are the 10th days of February, April, July, September, and December (it previously was January 31 and the 10th days of March, June, August, October, and December), and eight days before the primary, general, or special election; in a non-

[151] 2014 N.Y. City Law No. 041.

[152] In the Print, the term "political advertising" includes newspaper and magazine advertising; posters; circulars and mailers; billboards; handbills; bumper stickers; sample ballots; initiative, referendum, or recall petitions; radio or television advertisements; paid telephone calls and text messaging; digital media advertisements; and other printed and digital materials produced by the persons in this subsection and intended to support or oppose: (1) a candidate or group of candidates; or (2) any initiative, referendum, or recall measure.

election year, the 10th days of February, July, September, and December (it was January and July 31 (annually) and the 10th day of December (only in the year before the election)). For PACs and IEC, reports are required by the 10th days of February, April, July, September, and December, and 8 days before a primary, general, or special election. The Print further requires that all reports published by the CFB be available online and specifies that reports of contributions and expenditures must be made sortable to allow for filtering by street address, city, state, and zip code. The Print further enhances disclosures for any bundling by lowering the threshold amount for disclosure from $10,000 to $5,000.

Lastly, the Print improves training requirements by requiring that all Mayoral-appointed board and commission members be trained by BEGA on the District's ethics laws within ninety days after their commencement of service. It also requires that the mandatory training of candidates and their treasurers include training on the Fair Elections Program and requirements pertaining to business contributors, their affiliated entities, and covered contractors. The CFB must post on its website the names of required attendees who have not completed the training.

6. Keeping Pace with Evolving Case Law

The Committee Print make two changes to keep pace with evolving case law. The first is to repeal the District's aggregate contribution limit. Currently, outdated District law limits a person's total contributions per election to $8,500 to all candidates. Such aggregate contribution limits have been held by the Supreme Court to be unconstitutional.[153]

Second, the Print establishes "non-contribution accounts" for PACs. These non-contribution accounts are segregated from other PAC funds and may only be used to make independent expenditures (not to contribute to political committees). This change arises from the United States District Court for the District of Columbia's decision in Carey et al. v. FEC.[154] In that case, the FEC entered into a consent judgment with the plaintiffs agreeing that it would not enforce the contribution limitations with respect to funds received for independent expenditures so long as the PAC maintained a separate bank account for this activity. The Court held that the FEC may require a PAC to have two bank accounts to prevent the cross-over of funds – one account subject to contribution limitations and source prohibitions and one not subject to these regulations – and that was a narrowly tailored means of limiting a PAC's First Amendment rights. Consistent with this decision, the Committee Print establishes separate non-contribution accounts for PACs to deposit and withdraw funds raised in unlimited amounts from individuals, [153] McCutcheon v. FEC, 572 U.S. 185 (2014). The plaintiff in this case was a businessperson and Republican Party activist. As of September 2012, he had given $33,088 to sixteen federal candidates and more than $25,000 in non-candidate contributions during the 2011-2012 cycle. He intended to donate to an additional twelve federal candidates, bringing his contribution total over the federal aggregate limit on federal candidates. He filed suit against the FEC, alleging that the contribution limits were unconstitutional. The Supreme Court overturned the limits on aggregate federal campaign contributions because such limits failed the test of preventing corruption. Id.

[154] Carey v. FEC, 791 F. Supp. 2d 121, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 62464. In this case, the plaintiff sought permission to operate a "Super-Duper" PAC, combining an independent expenditure-only PAC and PAC that makes direct contributions to candidates as a single entity for FEC purposes. The plaintiff sought a declaratory judgment that enforcing limits on contributions would violate the First Amendment by prohibiting the raising of funds for independent expenditure purposes and direct contributions to candidates by the same PAC in two segregated bank accounts. The FEC argued that the PAC must create two different PACs to keep the finances from direct candidate support and independent expenditures separate. Id.

corporations, labor organizations, or other political committees. These accounts will not be used to make contributions, whether direct or in-kind, or coordinated expenditures (which are considered contributions under District law). This prevents funds restricted by contribution limits from being co-mingled with funds not subject to such limitations.

7. Miscellaneous Provisions

Lastly, the Committee Print contains several miscellaneous provisions. First, the Print amends the Prohibition on Government Employee Engagement in Political Activity Act of 2010, effective March 31, 2011 (D.C. Law 18-355; D.C. Official Code § 1-1171.02) (the "local Hatch Act"), by clarifying that government employees may only use annual or unpaid leave when they are designed by a public official to knowingly solicit, accept, or receive a political contribution. The current law merely states that an employee must use "leave" but does not specify what type of leave is acceptable to use. The Print also provides that designated employees can only perform that function for a principal campaign committee, exploratory committee, or a transition committee. Designated employees must be listed on BEGA's website. These amendments have their genesis in Attorney General Racine's bill. Second, the Committee Print permits the Attorney General to create a transition committee – under current law, only the Mayor and Chairman may have such committees. This was likely an oversight when the Council passed legislation to create an independent, elected Attorney General.

III. Conclusion

With the Committee Print, the Committee makes sweeping and transformational reforms to the District's campaign finance laws. These reforms range from bolstering agency oversight to curbing real or perceived pay-to-play politics, and from addressing improper coordination between campaigns and independent spenders to enhancing disclosure requirements and training. Throughout the Committee Print's reforms, there are constant themes: combatting the actuality or perception of corruption and undue influence of money in our elections, and restoring public trust through increased transparency and disclosure.

Although the entirety of the bill will be subject to appropriations, the Committee intends to identify the necessary funds in the Fiscal Year 2020 budget. The Committee has also delayed the applicability date of the bill's pay-to-play provisions until November 4, 2020 – the day after the next General Election – to allow the implementing authorities sufficient time to plan for the program's rollout, particularly with the launch of the Fair Elections Program only weeks away from the date of this report.

WITNESS LIST AND HEARING RECORD

The Committee on the Judiciary and Public Safety held a hearing on B22-0107, the "Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2018", on July 10, 2017. A video recording of the hearing can be viewed at https://entertainment.dc.gov/page/demand-2017. The following witnesses testified before the Committee or submitted written testimony:

Public Witnesses

Dorothy Brazill – Executive Director, D.C. Watch

Ms. Brazill testified that she has been the head of D.C. Watch for more than twenty years and has followed efforts to reform campaign finance law since 2012. She has filed numerous complaints and has argued cases as a non-lawyer before the D.C. Court of Appeals to get campaign finance laws enforced. She testified that there needs to be improved administration and enforcement at the Office of Campaign Finance, where there are currently long delays, lost files, and minor fines imposed in cases of flagrant violation of campaign laws. Moreover, she believes that that "whatever regime that is put in place" needs watchdogs. She concluded that any change made to campaign finance law must be simple, readable, and understandable. Also, regarding B22-0032, the "Clean Elections Amendment Act of 2017", Ms. Brizill says that there are already laws that limit the amount that be raised annually – instead, what is needed is an Office of Campaign Finance that is vigilant in monitoring existing law.

Dan Wedderburn – Member, D.C. for Democracy (Presented by Zach Schalk)

Mr. Wedderburn testified in strong support of the bills. He stated that the bills could have a major impact on the corrupting influence of pay-to-play politics. He noted that, currently, large corporations and wealthy donors dominate our political system, increasing inequality in the District and corrupting democracy. He listed several features of the bills, which D.C. for Democracy supports, including: prohibiting lobbyists from bundling contributions, requiring disclosure for independent expenditures, allowing only individuals to contribute to PACs, allowing only individuals to contribute to constituent service funds, and limiting the ability of campaign contributors to engage in District contracts, grants, or tax abatements valued at $100,000 or more for two years. He welcomed the bills as reforms at a time when public cynicism is high, and there is a perception that elected officials are under the control of corporations and developers.

Linda Beebe – President, League of Women Voters of the District of Columbia

Ms. Beebe testified in support of the bills and strong campaign finance reforms. She stated that the League of Women Voters' major concerns are disclosure and stopping Super PACs (IECs in the District). She testified that the Clean Elections Amendment Act and the Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act seem to be straightforward improvements that could be enacted without much debate. She testified that the other two bills go to the heart of the problem of big money in politics and seek to eliminate the District's reputation for pay-to-play politics. She believes that we need to hold corporations, their executives, and family members accountable for contributions.

Ms. Beebe then discussed the differences she sees between the two pay-to-play bills—the limits they set on contributions. She noted that we want to make it possible for all candidates to have access to equitable funding, and it is a reality that campaigns cost money. She said that her organization often encounters voters who think their votes will not count—that only big money donors count. She thinks the bills will go a long way toward restoring public faith and trust in our democracy.

Eric Jones – Associate Director of Government Affairs, ABC Metro Washington

Mr. Jones, a self-identified registered lobbyist, testified in opposition to the bills. He stated that the bills give the public the impression that there is an issue with pay-to-play culture in District politics, which he believes is untrue and unfair. He called the bills "an assault on the corporate citizens of our population" and believes the bills will put corporations at a competitive disadvantage in the District. He stated that the bills prevent corporations doing business with the District from participating in the political process and take away the voice of that constituency. He gave examples of legislation where he believes there was no undue influence by corporations or lobbyists despite their campaign contributions, for example, the passage of the Universal Paid Leave Act and the increase of the minimum wage. He ended by making recommendations, including full transparency rather than prohibitions, proper disclosure of contributions, and he opposed what he called "tedious" compliance requirements.

Roderic Woodson – Partner, Holland & Knight LLP

Mr. Woodson testified that members of the business community are "citizens" in that they pay taxes and follow the law just like everyone else—and therefore should be able to influence their government. He stated that business entities have the right to engage in public affairs, and there is nothing inherently corrupting about monetary contributions from businesses to political campaigns. He noted that complex compliance requirements and numerous filings increase the likelihood of inadvertent errors. He said that B22-0008 is "death by a thousand cuts" to any business interest, business entity, or business person by implementing "an intricate web" of regulatory prescriptions, prohibitions, and reporting requirements. He stated that B22-0032 is "constitutionally dubious" because it prohibits any contribution to a political committee by anyone other than an individual. He called B22-0008 "almost retaliatory" in its approach because any contribution to an elected official, candidate, political committee, political party, or PAC is grounds for disqualification from doing business with the District. He believes that the assertion that a contribution to a political party or PAC would cause preferential consideration is "extremely remote" and "overkill". He recommended that the period to retire debt in B22-0107 should be extended from six months to nine months.

Erika Wadlington – Director of Public Policy & Programs, D.C. Chamber of Commerce

Ms. Wadlington testified in opposition to B22-0008, B22-0032, and B22-0051. She identified areas where the D.C. Chamber of Commerce can support the Council's effort to foster more transparency in the election process. She recommended that the Council focus on disclosure as an essential public accountability mechanism to increase transparency and boost public confidence in elections. She also recommended that the Council focus on "major contracts"—contracts over $1 million—to address concerns of undue influence. She expressed concern that the Council would consider prohibiting an individual from voicing their support through campaign contributions solely because they have chosen a profession in business. She believes that corporations and businesses should be able to participate in the democratic process without impacting their ability to partner with the District.

David Julyan – Counsel, Washington Parking Association

Mr. Julyan, a self-identified registered lobbyist, testified in a written statement that there are two fundamental issues to address in the realm of campaign finance: (1) reasonable and appropriate disclosure, and (2) a level playing field. He believes that public disclosure of contributions and contracts would hold officials accountable and should be a part of the contracting process. He stated that BEGA requires semi-annually itemizing every contact with a public official, which is "confusingly uninformative and inconsistently reported." He believes that lobbyists should be required to disclose key information about who they are communicating with and about what. He stated that many lobbyists fall within BEGA's definition of lobbying and do not register and whose compensated efforts remain undisclosed, which he thinks is wrong. He also believes that elected public officials should have to make disclosures about contacts with lobbyists. He furthermore testified that there is a line between participation in the political process and pay-to-play—a line he has had no trouble seeing over the past forty-five years. He thinks the proposals in the bills limiting contributions from family members of a corporate officer defy reasonableness, fairness, and perhaps the Constitution.

Brent Ferguson – Counsel, Brennan Center for Justice

Mr. Ferguson testified in support of B22-0008, B22-0032, and B22-0051. He stated that well-targeted campaign finance laws can ameliorate the risk of corruption and the public's feeling that their voices are not heard. He stated that other jurisdictions' laws demonstrate the value of requiring meaningful disclosure of spending, preventing coordination between campaigns and outside groups, and limiting campaign contributions by government contractors.

Mr. Ferguson testified that the Brennan Center strongly supports updates to disclosure laws in response to the rise of independent expenditures—that such disclosures cam discourage corruption and better inform voters about candidates. He cited studies from states and cities across the country that have implemented well-crafted disclosure laws and successfully reduced undisclosed spending. He recommended two amendments: (1) require outside spending groups to report the original source of major contributions, and (2) require sponsors of advertising to list the original source for their top five contributors.

Mr. Ferguson also testified that adopting rules regarding the distinction between coordinated and independent expenditures has become critical to maintaining integrity in elections and preventing candidates from circumventing contribution limits. He stated that provisions in the proposed bills would improve coordination laws, and he suggested two additions to B22-0008 to strengthen it: (1) create a "cooling off" period such that consultants who work for a campaign may not immediately thereafter work for an IEC, and (2) add a provision that any expenditure for a communication that reproduces a covered campaign advertisement will be treated as coordinated.

Mr. Ferguson further testified that certain types of contributors pose a special risk of corruption because they have much to gain from influencing government decision-making. He stated that the D.C. Circuit upheld a federal ban on contributions by government contractors, concluding that such a restriction reduces the risk of corruption. He discussed B22-0008 and B22-0051, stating that it is important to cover prospective contractors and grantees. He recommended that the Council make certain that each bill prevents contractors from contributing shortly after receiving a contract, as well.

Deborah Shore – Chair, Ward 3 Democratic Committee

Ms. Shore testified in support of the bills and stated that the Ward 3 Democratic Committee unanimously passed a resolution on campaign finance reform with a focus on democratizing the election process and encouraging fair governance. She testified that the Committee specifically supports prohibiting entities that make political contributions from bidding on or engaging in District government contracts. They also support allowing only individuals to contribute to political committees and constituent service programs, as well as prohibiting the coordination of independent expenditure committees with political campaigns. She stated that strengthening the District's campaign finance laws will significantly reduce the corrupting influence of money in politics and transform our political culture for the better.

Adav Noti – Senior Director of Trial Litigation & Strategy, Campaign Legal Center

Mr. Noti testified in support of the bills, which he believes will make important improvements to the District's campaign finance laws. He discussed the constitutionality of pay-to-play laws, stating that courts have approved reasonable restrictions on campaign-related spending of entities doing business with the government. In fact, at least seventeen states, as well as numerous municipalities (e.g., Los Angeles and New York City), have limits or prohibitions on such activities. He noted that the D.C. Circuit also upheld such restrictions, recognizing two significant government interests sufficient to justify the ban: preventing the actuality and appearance of corruption and preventing interference with merit-based public administration to ensure that contracting depends upon meritorious performance rather than political service. He added that the Second Circuit has also upheld similar laws. He stated that the Council has a significant role in the oversight of the contract process, which can create the appearance of, if not the opportunity for, favoritism towards political supporters. Thus, he supports the implementation of restrictions on pay-to-play.

Mr. Noti also testified about coordination. He stated that as a result of the Citizens United decision, the amount of unlimited outside spending has increased, and the legal lines separating independent and coordinated spending have become critically important. Without effective regulation of coordinated spending, contribution limits are meaningless. He explained that coordinated expenditures may constitutionally be limited. He stated that the anti-coordination provisions in the Attorney General's bill would help maintain a meaningful line between groups making independent expenditures and candidates. The presumptions laid out in the bill are reasonable, targeted responses to the kinds of coordination we have seen in the District.

Aquene Freechild – Co-Director, Democracy is for the People Campaign, Public Citizen

Ms. Freechild testified in support of the bills. She noted that no single bill can rebuild the public's trust after scandals such as the one involving Fort Myer and the Mayor's office and the illegal contributions accepted by both the Mayor's campaign and Councilmember Todd's campaign. She stated that taking serious and concerted action on pay-to-play issues is the best possible way to show progress on campaign finance reform. She also highlighted the importance of limiting the contributions of family members of contractors and encourages the Committee to ensure the provision is included in the final bill. She pointed to a report by Public Citizen on the amount of money coming from corporations, their executives, and family members in the early primaries, which showed that 40% of contributions came from construction and real estate corporations. She used Fort Myer as an example: in the 2016 primary, Fort Myer Corporation LLC gave $3,000 to various candidates. However, if executives, family members and family trusts are included, that number increases to over $20,000 in contributions. The company's two top executives, their immediate family members, and their family trusts gave an additional $17,700 to Council campaigns. This illustrates that direct corporate giving can be a small fraction of total giving associated with the corporation. She emphasized that a pay-to-play bill must include executives, officers, family members, as well as disallow the use of family trusts.

Sarah Livingston – Public Witness

Ms. Livingston testified that after conducting her own research, she thinks that B22-0008 "comes the closest to effectively addressing the concerns citizens have that there is a 'pay-to-play' culture in DC's political life." She noted that the bill addresses the kinds of things that businesses can do under the law and both the "perception" of wrongdoing and the "loopholes" in the current law. Regarding B22-0107, she supports the provision of the bill which requires candidates to get permission to use someone's likeness in campaign literature. She also thinks wrapping up campaigns and its debt by the next campaign is more realistic. Moreover, she would also like to know if a candidate-elect's campaign is in order prior to being sworn in. Ms. Livingston also recommends that OCF report on violations, complaints, audits, and investigations. She concluded her testimony by recommending that the reforms be thorough and comprehensive.

Government Witnesses

Cecily Collier-Montgomery – Director of the Office of Campaign Finance

Director Collier-Montgomery testified that OCF, established within BOE, is charged with the administration of the District's campaign finance laws and enhancing resident confidence in the District's election process. She presented two testimonies, one covering B22-0032, B22-0107 and B22-0008, and the other on B22-0051. Regarding the former, Director Collier-Montgomery stated that the bills "...will complement the existing campaign finance laws and operate in sync to more effectively prevent the evasion of the disclosure requirements, and the contribution limits and prohibitions...". She noted that District residents will be better informed due to the proposed amendments presented in the bills. She testified that the proposed amendments will increase the enforcement and audit responsibilities of OCF and require upgrades to the OCF E-Filing and Disclosure System in order to capture the new reporting requirements and contribution limitations.

Regarding B22-0032, the "Clean Elections Amendment Act of 2017", she noted that the amendment would further define the term "contribution" by including "coordinated expenditure", revise the certification statements of IECs, and include certifications that the committee is not controlled by or coordinated with other entities. She also noted that reporting will require modifications that eliminate labor, business, and other sub-categories.

The Director also testified that the proposals in B22-0107, the "Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017", "will not affect the continuing requirement of a committee pursuant to D.C. Code Section § 1-1163.09(10) to report its debts and obligations after the election until the debts and obligations are extinguished". However, the bill will require consent for individuals to be featured in campaign literature and advertisements. Referring to B22-0008, the "Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017", she testified that the bill "will increase the certification requirements of political action committees and independent expenditure committees to address the prohibition against the receipt of contributions solicited by 'covered campaigns'...". Further, the proposals in the bill will require enhancements to the OCF E-Filing system. She testified that the fiscal impacts of B22-0032, B22-0107, and B22-0008 will require a "rough estimate" of $67,320 to cover costs of the OCF E-Filing System.

Regarding B22-0051, the "Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017", the Director testified that in OCF's view, the restrictions on family members of "covered contractors" and its officers, directors and principals could "extend beyond OCF's ability to effectively enforce the legislation." She noted that OCF currently does not have the capacity to identify and monitor immediate relatives, and enforcement of this provision would require "the creation of a database by government contracting officers of 'covered contractors' that provides information regarding all affected parties". She testified that enactment of this legislation would require OCF to coordinate oversight efforts with District agencies to facilitate the coordination of inter-agency data flow.

Karl Racine – Attorney General for the District of Columbia

Attorney General Racine testified that his office "has a statutory mandate to uphold the public interest" and, in accordance with this mandate, introduced B22-0008. He also noted that he supports the goals and objectives of the accompanying measures, B22-0032, B22-0051 and B22-0107. Mr. Racine's testimony referenced the OAG and Georgetown University forum, "Campaign Finance in the District of Columbia", where the comments and questions, "made clear that there is an overwhelming perception among District residents that big money exerts an undue influence on government decision-makers – to the detriment of residents' needs and concerns." He also referenced the report, "Findings and Recommendations of Mary M. Cheh on the Department of General Services Contracting and Personnel Management." Mr. Racine testified that this report highlighted pay-to-play issues in the District and led Councilmember Cheh to suggest that the Council should "consider amending campaign finance laws to regulate campaign contribution by contractor".

Mr. Racine testified that B22-0008 ends the practice and perception of pay-to-play politics by preventing donors from engaging in large business contracts, grants, or receiving tax breaks with the District for a period of two years. It makes political donations transparent by ensuring all organizations making independent expenditures above a certain threshold will have to identify anyone who has donated more than $200 towards expenditures. The proposed legislation also creates a "bright line" between candidates and PACs to ensure that when someone works with a campaign, they cannot claim to be an independent contributor, and they will be subject to the same regulations.

Lastly, Mr. Racine testified that B22-0008 will amend current law concerning PACs to bring the District into compliance with First Amendment case law. The bill would also ensure that members of District boards and commissions appointed by District government officials receive the same rigorous ethics training as District employees.

COMMITTEE ACTION

On October 18, 2018, the Committee on the Judiciary and Public Safety held an Additional Meeting to consider and vote on B22-0107, the "Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2018". The meeting was called to order at 3:40 p.m. Chairperson Charles Allen recognized a quorum consisting of himself and Councilmembers Anita Bonds, Mary M. Cheh, Vincent Gray, and David Grosso.

Chairperson Allen first provided opening remarks, describing the Committee Print and its origins. He then turned to Councilmember Cheh, who expressed her support for the reforms in the Print, including its pay-to-play provisions. She noted her work on this issue, including her report on contracting in the Department of General Services. She offered an amendment to "maintain the status quo with respect to constituent services funds". Councilmember Cheh stated that the Committee Print's proposed limitations on the funds did not "necessarily [represent] the right [approach...], and in some instances, [...] may blur the line between what is an allowable or non-allowable use of the funds, and in so doing, may have the potential of ensnaring Members who attempt the use the funds in a permissive and legitimate way". She then moved an oral amendment to (1) restore the ability of Councilmembers to transfer excess campaign contributions from their political committees to their constituent-service programs; (2) strike language in the Print that required expenditures from a constituent-service program to be for activities, services, or programs which "directly" provide services to District residents; and (3) strike the limitations in the Print restricting constituent-service funds from being used on year-long or season admissions to theatrical, sporting, or cultural events. Chairperson Allen clarified which sections of the Print were implicated by Councilmember Cheh's oral amendment and confirmed the Print's pay-to-play restrictions on contributions by covered contractors to constituent-service programs were not included in the amendment.

Councilmember Grosso spoke in opposition to the amendment, stating that he did not find it appropriate to raise money while in office, which a constituent-service program allows Councilmembers to do. He argued that the programs should be banned outright, and the Committee Print's proposed restrictions were laudable. Councilmember Gray expressed his support for Councilmember Cheh's amendment, stating that his ward has serious need for financial support for various services, including utility assistance. Councilmember Bonds also expressed her support for the amendment, stating that constituent-service programs allow her to support community events. The amendment passed 3-2, with Chairperson Allen and Councilmember Grosso voting no.

On the bill as amended, Chairperson Allen then turned to his colleagues for comments. Councilmember Gray thanked Chairperson Allen and his staff for their hard work and meeting with him in advance of the markup. He noted that the bill contains provisions from his campaign finance reform legislation pending in Committee and from similar legislation he introduced in 2013 as Mayor. Councilmember Grosso expressed his support for the bill, including the Print's Office of Campaign Finance-related provisions. He supported the Committee Report's efforts to highlight instances of the perception of impropriety, arguing that the Print's loan limitations, debt retirement provisions, disclosure requirements, and pay-to-play restrictions would work to this end. He referenced the other election-based reforms still to be undertaken in this area. Councilmember Cheh remarked that the Committee Print represents a "huge effort...to move our elections system forward in a very meaningful way".

Chairperson Allen, without objection, moved the Committee Report and Print for B22-0107 en bloc with leave for staff to make technical, editorial, and conforming changes. The Committee voted 5-0 to approve the Committee Report and Print with the Members voting as follows:

YES: Chairperson Allen and Councilmembers Bonds, Cheh, Gray, and Grosso

NO: None

PRESENT: None

ABSENT: None

ATTORNEY GENERAL
KARL A. RACINE

January 5, 2017

The Honorable Phil Mendelson
Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia
John A. Wilson Building
1350 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Suite 504
Washington, DC 20004

Dear Chairman Mendelson:

I am writing to transmit the "Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017." The bill ensures that independent expenditures are truly independent by requiring candidates, elected officials, affiliated committees, and their agents to wall themselves off from entities that make independent expenditures, including Political Action Committees (PACs) and independent expenditure committees. It does so by borrowing from both previously introduced legislation and from federal regulations. Candidates, officials, committees, and agents would not be allowed to encourage anyone to donate to an independent expenditure committee or a PAC. PACs and independent expenditure committees in turn would have to certify that, to the best of their knowledge, after due diligence, they have not received any donations that were coordinated with any candidate, official, political committee, or political party. Moreover, any expenditure coordinated with a candidate, campaign, or agent would be treated as a contribution to that candidate or campaign.

The bill also ensures that the public knows who is behind independent expenditures by requiring extensive disclosure. The bill requires individuals and entities making such expenditures to disclose not only how much they spend, but also to identify any affiliates or donors associated with that spending. These requirements will prevent individuals and organizations from hiding behind "dark money" groups to circumvent sunlight provisions.

The bill closes a significant PAC loophole. Under current regulations, restrictions on giving to a PAC do not apply during any calendar year in which the committee is not supporting candidates in either a primary or general election. Consequently, a PAC could collect unlimited donations in non-election years, even for political contributions, although of course it could not give above the maximum to any one candidate. The bill repeals this exemption.

The bill builds on prior campaign finance proposals to sever the connection between contributions and significant business dealings with the District. It focuses on what it calls "doing business with the District": large contracts, large grants, large tax abatements, and agreements to acquire, sell, or lease land or a building – the type of arrangements where the concern of pay-to-play corruption appears highest. Anyone who contributed to a candidate or elected official who could influence or award any of these types of business, to any political committee affiliated with that candidate or official, and to certain individuals or organizations closely tied to such a candidate or official, would be ineligible to do high-value business with the District. This ineligibility would last for two years following the election for which the contribution was made. Anyone seeking to "do business with the District" would need to certify that he or she was in compliance with District pay-to-play law, and the District would be forbidden from "doing business with" anyone who was ineligible to "do business with the District."

Moreover, current law allows the Mayor and each Councilmember to each designate one employee who may solicit and receive political contributions while on leave. The bill would narrow this provision by limiting the type of leave that a designated employee can use for this purpose (annual or unpaid leave only) and specifying that an employee may only solicit and receive political contributions for a principal campaign committee or an exploratory committee.

Finally, the bill would require board and commission members to receive ethics training from the Board of Ethics and Government Accountability.

If you have any questions, your staff may contact my Legislative Director, James A. Pittman, on (202) 724-6517.

Sincerely,

Karl A. Racine
Attorney General for the District of Columbia

Chairman Phil Mendelson
at the request of the Attorney General

A BILL

IN THE COUNCIL OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Chairman Phil Mendelson, at the request of the Attorney General, introduced the following bill, which was referred to the Committee on _____

To require political action committees to direct their contributions through regulated accounts that are designated for that purpose; clarify that expenditures coordinated with a candidate or campaign are considered contributions to that candidate or campaign; require political action committees and independent expenditure committees to certify that the donations they have received have not been coordinated with any candidate or campaign; enhance disclosure of independent expenditures; prohibit candidates, public officials, and their affiliated political committees from soliciting donations to any independent expenditure committee or political action committee; close the loophole allowing unlimited contributions to a political action committee in a year when the committee is not supporting candidates; disqualify individuals and corporations from large contracts or other significant business with the District if they have recently contributed to certain covered recipients; regulate Hatch Act employee designations by requiring them to be for a principal campaign or exploratory committee, requiring employees to use either annual or unpaid leave, requiring designated employees to disclose their designation to the Board of Ethics and Government Accountability, and requiring the Board to post designated-employee information on its website; require members of boards and commissions to obtain ethics training from the Board at the beginning of their service.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, That this Act may be cited as the "Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017".

The hearing will take place in Room 500 of the John A. Wilson Building, 1350 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., at 9:30 a.m.

The stated purpose of Bill 22-0008, the "Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017", is to require political action committees to direct their contributions through regulated accounts that are designated for that purpose; clarify that expenditures coordinated with a candidate or campaign are considered contributions to that candidate or campaign; require political action committees and independent expenditure committees to certify that the donations they have received have not been coordinated with any candidate or campaign; enhance disclosure of independent expenditures; prohibit candidates, public officials, and their affiliated political committees from soliciting donations to any independent expenditure committee or political action committee; close the loophole allowing unlimited contributions to a political action committee in a year when the committee is not supporting candidates; disqualify individuals and corporations from large contracts or other significant business with the District if they have recently contributed to certain covered recipients; regulate Hatch Act employee designations by requiring them to be for a principal campaign or exploratory committee, requiring employees to use either annual or unpaid leave, requiring designated employees to disclose their designation to the Board of Ethics and Government Accountability, and requiring the Board to post designated-employee information on its website; and require members of boards and commissions to obtain ethics training from the Board at the beginning of their service.

The stated purpose of Bill 22-0032, the "Clean Elections Amendment Act of 2017", is to amend the Board of Ethics and Government Accountability Establishment and Comprehensive Ethics Reform Amendment Act of 2011 to clarify when expenditure committees are genuinely independent of a candidate or officeholder and to allow only individuals to contribute to political committees and constituent service programs.

The stated purpose of Bill 22-0051, the "Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017", is to amend the Board of Ethics and Government Accountability Establishment and Comprehensive Ethics Reform Amendment Act of 2011 to add definitions for the terms "covered contractor", "prohibited recipient", and "related party", to amend definitions for the terms "contribution", "expenditure", and "political committee", to prohibit registered lobbyists from bundling contributions, to establish campaign restrictions for covered contractors during prohibited periods prior to an election, to prohibit contributions in excess of $25 in the form of a money order, to require disclosures from those who make substantial independent expenditures, to give covered contractors an opportunity to cure violations prior to the commencement of an enforcement action, and to provide a separate penalty provision for covered contractor violations.

The stated purpose of Bill 22-0107, the "Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017", is to amend the Board of Ethics and Government Accountability Establishment and Comprehensive Ethics Reform Amendment Act of 2011 to require principal campaign committees to retire all debts within six months after an election, and to require committees and candidates to obtain consent before using an individual's likeness in campaign literature, advertisements, websites, or social media.

DC FOR DEMOCRACY

TESTIMONY OF DAN WEDDERBURN
BEFORE THE DC COUNCIL COMMITTEE ON JUDICIARY & PUBLIC SAFETY

RE: CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM BILLS B22-0008, B22-0032, B22-0107 & B22-0051

JULY 10, 2017

Mr. Chairman, and members, I am Dan Wedderburn, testifying for DC for Democracy (DC4D) as a member of its Steering Committee. With over 600 members, we have repeatedly pushed for major campaign and ethics reform in DC.

DC for Democracy strongly supports the Bills being considered today. If enacted, they can have a major impact on the corrupting influence of the pay-to-play culture that exists. Large corporations and wealthy donors, including many not residing here, dominate our political system. They contribute well over half of the total contributions made to candidates for City Council and Mayor. Meanwhile small donors, mostly middle and low income households have little influence. The result is DC's ever-increasing inequality that ranks among the highest in the nation. The notion of Democracy, which Webster's clearly defines as a government that represents the people, does not really exist.

Some important features of these Bills DC for Democracy supports include:

1. Any business, individual or association that contributes to candidates for political office would not be eligible to seek or engage in DC contracts, grants or tax abatements valued at $100,000 or more, for two years, effective for the 2018 campaign. Require the same for agreements to acquire, sell or lease land or a building.
2. Allow individuals only to contribute to Constituent Services Funds that allow incumbents to receive $40,000 a year that is spent mostly for their re-election not for helping needy people with emergency assistance as intended. Currently the same corporations that contribute to campaigns dominate contributions to incumbents for these funds.
3. Allow only individuals to contribute to PACs.
4. Require extensive disclosure of individuals who make Independent Expenditures.
5. Close the significant PAC loophole that allows them to receive unlimited donations in non-election years for political contributions.
6. Prohibit lobbyists from bundling contributions.

We congratulate the Council for introducing serious legislative reforms to address the insidious pay-to-play culture. These reforms are welcome at a time when public cynicism is high and there is widespread suspicion that elected officials are under the control of corporations and developers. It unfairly jeopardizes the reputation of elected officials who do conduct themselves with honesty and integrity. Enacting the proposed legislative reforms would go far towards increasing public confidence in our government. Thank you.

Council of the District of Columbia Committee on Judiciary and Public Safety

RE: Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017 (B22-0008), Comprehensive Campaign Finance Amendment Act of 2017 (B22-0051), Clean Elections Amendment Act of 2017, (B22-0032), and Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017 (B22-0107)
July 10, 2017

Good Morning. My name is Linda Beebe, currently the President of the League of Women Voters of the District of Columbia. I am here today to speak for the League in support of your passage of strong campaign finance reform.

The League of Women Voters is a citizens' organization that has fought since 1920 to improve our government and to engage citizens in the decisions that have an impact on their lives. Our mission is to encourage informed and active participation in government, work to increase understanding of major public policy issues, and influence public policy through education and advocacy.

Since the early 1970s, the League of Women Voters has studied and developed positions that support campaign finance reform. We have sought ways to combat undue influence in the election process and to eliminate the influence of "dark money." In the 2014-2016 biennium, the League of Women Voters conducted a national study of Money in Politics and developed a set of positions that resonate strongly with the bills you are considering today. Among our major concerns are disclosure and stopping the Super PACs. For more on our findings, please see the resource section of this testimony.

Today you are considering the merits of four bills aimed at improving our democratic elections processes. Two of them—B22-0032, the Clean Elections Amendment Act of 2017, introduced by Councilmembers Grosso, Silverman, Cheh, Allen, and Nadeau, and B22-0107, the Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017, introduced by Councilmembers Bonds, Allen, and Grosso—seem to us straight forward improvements that could be enacted without much debate. The Clean Elections Act would clarify when expenditures are considered contributions and allow only individuals to contribute to political committees. The Campaign Finance Reform Act would require consent for the use of someone's image in campaign literature; most importantly it would require candidates to retire campaign debts within six months. We would hope this bill will lead to greater accounting for contributions and expenses.

The other two bills go to the heart of the problems with big money in politics. The Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act (B22-0008), introduced by Chairman Mendelson for Attorney General Karl Racine, seeks to assure independent expenditures, prevent both individuals and organizations from hiding behind "dark money" groups, and close the loophole that allows PACs to collect unlimited donations in non-election years. The Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act (B22-0051), introduced by Council Members Gray and Trayon White, addresses many of the same issues. The bill would establish restrictions on bundled contributions and sets forth disclosure requirements.

Both bills seek to eliminate the District's long running reputation for being a pay-to-play jurisdiction, a place where developers gain city contracts and tax abatements with political contributions. Investigative reporters and public interest groups have documented the connections between contributions and contracts and the recurring habits of Limited Liability Corporations bundling contributions from family and friends. We need to hold both corporations and their executives and families accountable for contributions.

In our reading the bills differ primarily in the limits they would set on contributions. We hope that the Judiciary Committee will reach agreement on combining the two bills into one that the full Council will pass in the very near term. Running for office costs money, but money should not be permitted to buy elections. We want to make it possible for all candidates to have equitable access to funding and for the maximum number of citizens to participate in elections.

All year you will find League of Women Voters members working across the city to register voters and to encourage them to vote. Regrettably, all too often, we meet residents who say they see no value in voting because their vote won't count—it's the big money that counts. We believe that the bills before you can go a long way toward restoring public faith and trust in our democracy. And we believe that our nation's capital should be in the forefront of reform that protects that democracy.

We hope that you will take positive action on these bills. Thank you for your attention.

Testimony
of
Eric J. Jones, MSF

June 10, 2017
Public Hearing of the Committee of the Judiciary and Public Safety

B22-0008, the "Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017"
B22-0032, the "Clean Elections Amendment Act of 2017"
B22-0051, the "Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017"
B22-0107, the "Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017"

Good morning Chairman Allen and the members of the Committee of the Judiciary and Public Safety "The Committee". I am Eric J. Jones, MSF, Associate Director of Government Affairs for the Associated Builders and Contractors "ABC" of Metro Washington. ABC of Metro Washington is the pre-eminent advocate for fair and open competition and the merit shop philosophy, and the premier construction association in the metropolitan Washington, D.C. area. I am also a fourth generation Washingtonian, a former candidate for At-Large City Council, former Executive Vice President of the DC Young Democrats and a three term member of the DC Democratic State Committee. In addition, I have also served as a political strategist and consultant for political campaigns on the National, State and Local.

Today I am speaking not only as an active lobbyist within this District for the last decade, but as someone with an unique set of experiences and expertise as it relates to the management of political campaigns, ballot initiatives and political action committees (PACs). In this regard I have a great concern with the undemocratic recommendations and blanket accusations laid out in the legislation before us today. Upon reading the aforementioned legislation, one would gain the impression that there is an ethics issues as it relates to a quid pro quo or pay for play culture in our local politics. One would also gain the impression that an inundation of corporate contributions and high paid lobbyist has taken control of our government and in particular or legislative body.

Not only are these accusations far from truthful, they are also an assault on the corporate citizens of our population, and stand to put these same entities at a competitive and corporate disadvantage within the District. Not only would the legislation in question prevent corporations that hope to do business with the District from taking part in the political process, they would also take away the voice of the group that provides a large portion of the operational funds for our government. The thought of this is especially troubling considering that over the last three legislative sessions we have seen an increase in the amount of legislation being pushed against corporations. In most instances the legislation is in direct opposition to the way these companies operate and are pushed and or developed by groups who have provided direct support to our legislature via political/campaign endorsements, direct campaign contributions and other support while not being covered by this legislation.

Even more concerning is the fact that we have seen time and time again having the most funds does not ensure a candidate will win election. Similarly, we have also seen that businesses and trade organizations who are in direct opposition of legislation before this body does not have undue influence no matter their previous campaign contributions and or lobbying budget. Some clear examples of both of these issues would be:

- The election of Councilman Phil Mendelson's in 2006, Council members Charles Allen and Elissa Silverman in 2014 & Councilman Trayon White in 2016.
- The passage of the Accrued Sick and Safe Act
- The increase of the District's minimum wage
- The passage of Wage Theft Legislation, and
- The passage of the Universal Paid Leave Act

Because of the reasons listed above, neither I nor the membership of ABC of Metro Washington can support these bills. We do however agree that the goal of any government should be openness, honesty and transparency. To those points, we would recommend that the committee consider the following points as we move forward:

1. Truly ethical decision making by officials weather elected or appointed requires full transparency and responsibility, not prohibitions.
2. All members of our citizenry, including our corporate citizens and their affiliate trade organizations have the right to engage in process of public affairs including, but not limited to communications with government officials as well as providing support for those who they deem in their best interest politically
3. Monetary contributions and support of ballot initiatives, political action committees, political candidates and political parties are not corrupting or unethical when properly monitored and disclosed to the public.
4. Complicated and tedious compliance requirements (especially increasing the number of fillings) increase the potential for inadvertent errors which will further lead to accusations of unethical behavior by our citizenry and government officials.

In closing, I thank you for the opportunity to provide testimony and am available to answer any questions you all may have.

Testimony
of Roderic L. Woodson, Esq.

Good day Chairman Allen and Members of the Committee on the Judiciary and Public Safety ("Committee"). My name is Roderic L. Woodson, and I am a partner with the Washington office of Holland & Knight LLP, and co-chair of its DC Practice Group. I am pleased to appear before the Committee to provide comments on Bill No. 22-0008, "Campaign finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017"; Bill No. 22-0032, "Clean Elections Amendment Act of 2017"; Bill No. 22-0051, "Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017"; and, Bill No. 22-107, "Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017".

At the outset, it is noted that I have been an active and engaged member of the District of Columbia community as both a resident and as a member of the legal/business sectors since the beginnings of modern Home Rule in the 1970s. Compared with other jurisdictions, ours is a young democracy; and, a hallmark of this short history is an openness to participation in public policy formation by the entirety of our citizenry. "Citizenry", however, is not simply limited to natural persons. Members of the business/commercial community are likewise "citizens" --- they pay taxes, comply with regulatory requirements, and follow the law just the same as everyone else. The one thing that is missing is the right to vote. Yet, absence of the voting franchise is not, and should not, act as a disqualification from being able to influence governmental affairs. Indeed, the sine qua non of any democracy is the ability of citizens to influence its government. The question at hand is how that influence is exercised within an appropriate ethical framework. [1]

This said, the Committee's attention is invited to several precepts within which to engage this debate:

First: Decision-making by elected and appointed officials calls for transparency in the conduct of public affairs. While, this idea seems axiomatic, there is a need to not only state the obvious, but to be considered about what "transparency" actually means, and when it should apply. On the surface it may mean conducting public affairs "in the light of day", or in a way that can be discerned by observers. However, since no one can see or hear everyone at the same time, "transparency" then implies a need for some form of reporting regime. But, what triggers such reporting? Is every interaction a reportable event -- i.e., a meeting; a phone conversation; a chance conversation on the street, in a social setting, some governmental forum, or otherwise? Does the subject of the interaction matter? Who is responsible to do this reporting? If the issue we are concerned about is "influencing" decision-making, what difference does it make with respect who is doing the "influencing"? Shouldn't all efforts to "influence" be known?

Second: Business entities, just like natural persons, have a right to engage in public affairs and to communicate with elected and appointed officials. Hyperbole to the side, is this really such a controversial matter? What is the objective which mandates that commercial interests should be muzzled when matters calling for public policy decision-making are being debated?

Third: There is nothing inherently nefarious or corrupting about monetary contributions or other contributions from businesses to political campaigns, political action committees, or political parties in the District if publicly disclosed.

Fourth: Undue complexity in technical compliance requirements, coupled with expanding the number of compliance filings (particularly in a shortened time periods), increases the likelihood of inadvertent errors and concomitant allegations of misconduct or legal violations.

These precepts are closely related, and the measures before you today on campaign finance and government procurement bring each of them to bear.

[1] "Ethics" in this situation is not a synonym for "legal ethics". Ethics in this situation are the broader principles of right and wrong which govern conduct in public policy decision-making where individual pecuniary interests are at issue.

Campaign Finance

Campaign finance is a very testy subject right now. "Let's get big money out of campaign finance" is the mantra of the day.[2] This slogan has been manipulated to advance the assumption that the presence of any money from a business source is improper as a corruption of electoral contests and thus an ethical violation per se.

Bill 22-0008 implements this notion through an intricate web of new or intensified regulatory prescriptions, certifications, prohibitions, and reporting requirements. Just to cite two examples: first, the demand that political action committees create segregated financial accounts for campaign expenditures, and then assigning expansive reporting and certification requirements for anyone or any entity who has donated to the "pac". All this in spite of the fact that, as legal entities, political action committees exist only to make political expenditures and they engage detailed reporting on such expenditures right now. The idea that a segregated account is somehow now needed is simply a fiction. Creation of such accounts do, however, provide another opening to create this additional layer of regulation.

The second example is the idea of "coordination" with political campaigns or political committees. After stating that such "coordination" is prohibited, the bill imposes as "rebuttable presumption" that an expenditure by a "person" is "coordinated" if the person knows, or is told about, about a campaign's "needs, plans, or messaging". Think about that a moment. Anyone can learn about a campaign's "needs, plans, or messaging" if one simply attends a campaign event. That is what any political campaign does – it tells folks about "needs, plans and messages".

In sum, this bill proposes death by a thousand cuts to any business interest, business entity or business person. The chance of inadvertent error is so great and the consequences of any error is so significant, that the best approach for any business interest is simply to stay away.

By contrast, Bill 22-32 goes right to the point: prohibit any contribution to a political committee by anyone other than an "individual", a Constitutionally dubious proposition on its face. The Bill proposes some other things also, but the idea is that political contributions from businesses are corrupting.[3]

[2] Never-mind that the District has some of the lowest campaign finance limitations in the nation.

[3] The issue of "coordination" is further muddled by Bill 22-32. This measure proposes amending DC Code 1-1163(a)(2) regarding independent expenditure committees by adding the idea of "control" and "coordination" (in addition to contributions) to political committee or political action committees. Moreover, this Bill also adds uncertainty to DC Code §1-1161.01(10A) by seeking to insert the phrase "or acting in a manner that creates the appearance thereof" to the definition of "Control or Controlling Interest". Under this language, the "appearance" of

However, one salient point is left out of all this legislative "hand-wringing" --- every campaign asks for the money it receives.

Government Procurement

Procurement of goods and services by the DC government has been a consistent issue over the years. At first, it was mainly a problem of consistent, reliable, fair, and professional procurement administration. The history of the Procurement Reform Act bears witness to this truth. Then, when that was not enough, Council review of contract awards was imposed --- where "review" means that the Council must affirmatively approve such awards. Thus, procurement draws both the executive and the legislative branches of government into a zone of "ethical" concerns called "pay to play". This is a short-hand assertion that individual commercial interests contribute to the political arena in order to receive "preferred consideration" when doing any business with the District.

Bill 22-8 is almost retaliatory in its approach. In this proposal any contribution to an elected official, a candidate for elected office, a political committee, a political party, or a political action committee is grounds for disqualification in any business relationship with the District government. While there is a credible argument to barring monetary contributions to elected officials, candidates, or their related political committees, that is not the same for the remaining categories. An assertion that a contribution to a political party or a political action committee would bring some "preferred consideration" in individual procurements is extremely remote and just overkill. Only slightly less dramatic, Bill 22-51 suffers the same infirmity.

With few exceptions, every elected official in the District is a member of the Democratic Party (and has been so since the beginning of Home Rule), and the Party does not decide or influence procurement decisions by the government. Concomitantly, political action committees are assemblages of individuals and businesses whose political expenditures are likewise remote from individual procurement decisions.

There is, however, an uncomfortable truth about all this. Council review and approval of procurement contracts is an inherently political decision. Thus, to preserve the political prerogatives of these decisions, we have thrust upon the community this "pay-to-play" imbroglio, along with the punitive regulatory structures we are considering at this very moment.

something becomes the problem/violation whether it actually is or not. "Control" or Controlling Interest" is a matter of fact, not just a speculation. These proposals should be rejected

Other Matters

Bill No. 22-107 proposes to specify that campaign debt should be retired with six (6) months following an election. It is recommended that this short time period be extended to at least nine (9) months Notwithstanding, if any time period is to be specified by the statute, the language should also include a "good cause" proviso where appropriate to avoid automatic violations and penalties. [4]

This concludes my prepared remarks, and I will be pleased to respond to any questions the Committee may wish to ask.

[4] Thus, DC Code §1-1163.10a(2) would read "Used to retire the proper debts of his or her political committee that received the funds within six (6) months following the election; provided, that this time period may be extended for good cause shown".

Testimony of Brent Ferguson
Counsel, Brennan Center for Justice at NYU School of Law

Submitted to the Council of the District of Columbia Committee on the Judiciary & Public Safety

July 10, 2017 Hearing
Re: Bill 22-0008; Bill 22-0032; Bill 22-0051

The Brennan Center for Justice at NYU School of Law thanks the Committee for the chance to discuss the benefits of several important campaign finance reforms today. In recent years, campaign spending from groups like super PACs has increased significantly and has often come from undisclosed sources. When such groups spend massive amounts on local elections, the risk of corruption and its appearance increases sharply, and regular citizens often feel that their voices are not heard. Yet smart and well-targeted campaign finance laws can ameliorate the worst abuses: experience in states and cities across the country demonstrates the value of laws (1) requiring meaningful disclosure of campaign spending; (2) preventing coordination between campaigns and unlimited outside groups; and (3) limiting campaign contributions by government contractors. For that reason, we support the goals behind bills 22-0008, 22-0032, and 22-0051. This testimony addresses the importance of those goals and suggests some amendments to the bills.

In addition to the suggestions made herein, we recommend that the Committee, and the Council as a whole, call for testimony and present evidence about specific problems that have arisen in the District's campaign finance system, as well as evidence (such as social science studies and experiences from other states) about how the proposed reforms could solve these problems.[1] Examining such evidence at the hearing stage can help the Council craft laws that will best respond to the problems the District has seen in recent years, and courts reviewing campaign finance laws often look closely at the reasons for passage and ask whether the legislature reviewed evidence of the laws' necessity.[2]

Meaningful disclosure of campaign spending

We strongly support the Council's efforts to update the District's disclosure laws in response to the recent rise of independent spending. Disclosure of campaign spending can discourage corruption by putting the spotlight on big spenders, and studies have demonstrated that information about such spending can affect voter evaluations of candidates.[3] States and cities across the country have responded to this spending by enacting laws designed to ensure that citizens know the identities of big-dollar donors seeking influence over elections and elected officials. Those with well-crafted laws have successfully reduced the amount of undisclosed spending in their elections.[4]

Bills 22-0008 and 22-0051 each contain elements that would improve citizens' access to information about election ads: Bill 22-0008 requires all groups that make independent expenditures disclose their donors, while Bill 22-0051 provides that all election-related advertisements must include a disclaimer naming the ad's sponsor. Both of these are vital to providing useful information for District residents: anyone who sees a political advertisement should know the name of the group responsible for it, and should be able to easily learn who is funding that group.

Some states have begun to enact even more robust laws so disclosed information is both thorough and easily accessible. We recommend consideration of two amendments that would serve those goals:

- Require that outside spending groups report the original source of each major contribution they receive, so they cannot mask the names of their true donors by accepting money from shell groups.[5] "Original source" can be defined as a person or entity that makes contributions from its own resources, such as wages, inheritance, or revenue, and not from donations.
- In addition to an advertising disclaimer that contains the sponsor of the communication, require the sponsor to list the original source for its top five contributors, so viewers can most easily learn the true source of the communication's funding.[6]

Preventing coordination between candidates and outside groups

Since the Supreme Court's decision in Citizens United and subsequent decisions allowing for the creation of super PACs, adopting straightforward rules regarding the distinction between coordinated and independent expenditures has become critical to maintaining integrity in elections and preventing candidates and outside spenders from circumventing contribution limits entirely. The Supreme Court has made it clear that expenditures made by groups or individuals in coordination with candidates should be treated as contributions, not independent expenditures, and thus should be subject to contribution limits.[7] Yet as noted in the Brennan Center's report examining coordination in the states after Citizens United, many jurisdictions fail to meaningfully prevent collaboration between candidates and super PACs, defeating the purpose of contribution limits.[8]

Several provisions in bills 22-0008 and 22-0032 would improve coordination laws in the District. Both bills clarify that any expenditure coordinated with a candidate's campaign should be treated like a contribution, and therefore limited. Importantly, both also require outside spending groups like super PACs to certify that they have not coordinated with a campaign. Such certification requirements that have withstood constitutional challenge[9] are valuable because they help remind outside groups of the rules, easing the enforcement burden.

Bill 22-0008 provides a more detailed definition of coordination, creating a rebuttable presumption that an expenditure is coordinated if there are certain indicators of overlap between a campaign and an outside group. The provisions included would make the District's coordination law more thorough than that of most jurisdictions, and we suggest two additions to strengthen it further:

- In proposed § 1-1161.01(10B)(B)(II), create a cooling off period such that consultants who work for a campaign may not immediately thereafter work for a super PAC. Thus, the language could be changed to: "(II) The person making the expenditure retains the services of a person who, in the previous two years, has provided the covered campaign with professional services related to campaign or fundraising strategy."
- Add a subdivision providing that any expenditure for a communication that reproduces a covered campaign advertisement will be treated as coordinated. Many coordination laws include such provisions to ensure that super PACs cannot use unlimited donations to reprint or rebroadcast candidate advertising.[10]

Restricting contributions by government contractors

Courts and others have consistently recognized that certain types of contributors pose a special risk of corruption because they have much to gain from influencing government decision-making. Among this class of contributors are companies and individuals seeking contracts or grants from government. Just two years ago, the United States Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit upheld the federal ban on contributions by government contractors, concluding that "the contracting context greatly sharpens the risk of corruption and its appearance."[11]

Bills 22-0008 and 22-0051 both prevent contributors from receiving contracts or grants from the government shortly after a contribution is made. Importantly, the structure of each bill covers prospective contractors and grant recipients — those who are in the process of seeking government funding may be the most likely to make contributions in order to gain favor with elected officials. We recommend that the Committee makes certain that each bill prevents contractors from contributing shortly after receiving a contract as well: in some circumstances, quid pro quo deals involve favorable government action followed by a contribution. Preventing contributions from those who have already won contracts lessens the likelihood of "wink and nod" exchanges in which a government official assists a prospective contractor with the understanding that a contribution will soon be forthcoming.

Testimony of Deborah Shore
Chair, Ward 3 Democratic Committee before the Committee on the Judiciary & Public Safely
July 10, 2017

My name is Deborah Shore and I am Chair of the Ward 3 Democratic Committee. I wish to thank Chairperson Charles Allen and other members of this Committee for the opportunity to provide testimony.

By way of background, the Ward 3 Democratic Committee is composed of over 90 Ward 3 Democratic Party activists who are elected from each precinct in Ward 3. The Committee has developed several issue task forces that afford our membership the capacity to conduct research and formulate positions and recommendations on issues of significance to the District of Columbia. Our Ethics Task Force is very active and is currently focused on campaign finance reform. The Ward 3 Democratic Committee partnered with the David A. Clarke School of Law at UDC to organize a panel discussion in May that focused on campaign finance reform.

On May 18, the Ward 3 Democratic Committee unanimously passed a resolution on campaign finance reform that I attach to my testimony. The resolution is premised on the desire to further democratize the election process and encourage fair governance. It also assumes that the cause of ethical governance will be served by addressing the "pay-to-play" culture that undermines trust in government. This culture, which is perfectly legal and widespread, is no less corrosive to our democracy than the occasional commitment of actual crimes.

The Ward 3 Democratic Committee's resolution supports several principles that are incorporated in the campaign finance reform bills that are the subject of this hearing, as well as the DC Fair Elections Act.

Specifically, we support prohibiting entities that make political contributions from bidding on or engaging in D.C. Government contracts (above a specified amount). We are pleased to see that this potentially transformational change is contained in both the Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act (B22-0008) and Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act (B22-0051).

We also support several changes to rules governing political action committees and constituent service programs. We favor allowing only individuals to contribute to political committees and constituent service programs, strengthening the regulation of independent political committees, and prohibiting the coordination of independent political committees with political campaigns. We are pleased to see that these changes are included in the Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act (B22-0008) and the Clean Elections Amendment Act (B22-0032).

Finally, we support closing loopholes relating to contributions to political action committees in non-election years. Again, we are pleased to see that this change is incorporated into the Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act (B22-0008).

Strengthening our campaign finance laws, as the above bills will do, will significantly reduce the corrupting influence of money in politics. In particular, the prohibition of entities that contribute to political campaigns from engaging in D.C. Government contracts promises to significantly transform our political culture for the better. For too long, companies holding large government contracts enjoy undue influence in the halls of government. The Ward 3 Democratic Committee, together with the broader public, is impatient to see this change.

We commend the Council for introducing these important bills and for holding this hearing. We hope that the Committee and the full Council will move these bills forward quickly and enact them this year. Together with the Fair Elections Act, this legislation will significantly improve governance and democracy in the District of Columbia.

Thank you for the opportunity to testify today. I'd be happy to answer any questions.

WARD 3 DEMOCRATS' RESOLUTION RE
CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM (5/8/17)

Whereas, the Ward 3 Democratic Committee supports ethical governance of the District of Columbia;

Whereas, DC residents are concerned that a "pay-to-play" culture distorts governmental decision-making;

Whereas, numerous studies have concluded that campaign finance reforms further democratize the election process, encourage fair governance, and result in cost savings to taxpayers;

Whereas, several campaign finance reforms which address such concerns are pending before the D.C. Council;

Therefore, it is hereby resolved by the Ward 3 Democratic Committee of the District of Columbia that:

1. We support the following general principles of the proposed Fair Elections Act of 2017 (B22-0192):
   a. To provide a system of voluntary public financing for qualifying candidates for D.C. Mayor, D.C. Council, Attorney General, and State Board of Education;
   b. To provide public funds that are capped at a specified amount and encourage small donations through a matching system;
   c. To impose limits on candidates who accept public financing, such as the source and amount of contributions;
   d. To impose conditions for qualifying for public financing, such as raising a minimum amount of small contributions from a minimum number of individuals.

2. We will work with other groups throughout the city that are actively seeking to promote the passage of public financing legislation.

3. We support the following general principle of the Government Contractor Pay-to-Play Prevention Amendment Act of 2017 (B22-0047), the Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017 (B22-0008), and the Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017 (B22-0051):

To prohibit entities that make political contributions from bidding on or engaging in D.C. government contracts above a specified amount.

4. We support the following general principle of the Clean Elections Amendment Act of 2017 (B22-0032) and the Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017 (B22-0008):

To allow only individuals to contribute to political committees and constituent-service programs, to strengthen the regulation of independent political action committees, and to prohibit their coordination with political campaigns.

5. We support the following general principle of the Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017 (B22-0008):

To close loopholes relating to contributions to political action committees in non-election years.

6. The Ward 3 Democratic Committee Chair or the Chair's designee(s), or the Ward 3 Democratic Committee Chair and the Ethics Task Force Co-Chairs or their designees, are authorized to transmit, testify to, publicize and carry out this resolution, and otherwise work with other individuals, organizations, and government representatives to implement this Resolution."

Passed unanimously by the Ward 3 Democratic Committee on May 18, 2017.

July 10, 2017

Good morning, Chairman Allen and Members of the Committee.

My name is Adav Noti; I am the Senior Director of Trial Litigation and Strategy at the Campaign Legal Center and former Associate General Counsel of the Federal Election Commission. The Campaign Legal Center is a nonpartisan organization that provides legal expertise and guidance to governmental bodies and organizations throughout the country regarding campaign finance and other election-law matters, and we litigate cases regarding those issues in the federal district and appellate courts, and in the United States Supreme Court.

Thank you for allowing me the opportunity to testify today in support of the Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Act of 2017 and the Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017.[1] The Campaign Legal Center has reviewed the bills very closely, and we believe that these bills would make important improvements to D.C.'s campaign finance laws. If enacted, these bills would meaningfully inhibit the types of pay-to-play scandals that have cast a shadow over the District's government in recent years. Further, the anti-coordination provisions in the Attorney General's bill would help prevent circumvention of candidate contribution limits through "independent" expenditures that are not truly independent of candidates.

Pay-to-Play

In the context of government contracting, courts have long recognized that a contractor's campaign contributions, or other forms of personal or campaign support, to officials with authority over contracts raise heightened corruption concerns. Indeed, Congress has prohibited federal contractors and prospective contractors from making political contributions to federal candidates since 1940. A growing number of states and localities similarly have taken steps to restrict political contributions from government contractors. At least seventeen states have limits or prohibitions on campaign contributions from current and/or prospective government contractors or licensees.[2] Various municipalities, including New York City and Los Angeles, have followed suit with their own "pay-to-play" restrictions.[3]

Courts have approved reasonable restrictions on the campaign-related spending of entities doing business with the government. In fact, the constitutionality of the federal contractor contribution ban — which bars contractors from contributing "directly or indirectly" to federal candidates, political parties or PACs — was recently upheld by the en banc D.C. Circuit.[4] The court recognized two governmental interests sufficient to justify the ban: preventing the actuality and appearance of corruption,[5] and preventing "interference with merit-based public administration" to ensure that contracting "depend[s] upon meritorious performance rather than political service."[6]

The Second Circuit has upheld similar laws, including New York City's regulation of contributions from entities "doing business" with the city.[7] The upheld law is expansive, covering persons who have received or are seeking contracts, franchises, concessions, grants, pension fund investment contracts, economic development agreements, or land use actions with the city.[8]

The D.C. Council's significant role in oversight of the contracting process — approving contracts worth more than $1 million — creates the appearance of, if not the opportunity for, favoritism towards political supporters.[9] We agree with the

As stated in her report, "Where impressions of favoritism cause contractors to refrain from bidding on particular contracts, that lack of competition means that the District loses out—on price, work quality, and engagement of local workers or businesses."[10]

Coordination

The Campaign Legal Center is keenly aware that the vast amount of money spent on independent expenditures has affected campaigns at all levels of government. The U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Citizens United and subsequent court decisions allowed corporations and labor unions to make unlimited expenditures to influence elections so long as the expenditures are actually independent of candidates.[11] As the amount of unlimited outside spending has increased, the legal lines separating "independent" and "coordinated" spending have become critically important. Candidates, their supporters, and their lawyers have pushed the boundary of what constitutes an "independent" expenditure to absurdity. Without effective regulation of coordinated spending between candidates and their supporters, candidate contribution limits are meaningless. For example, if a D.C. mayoral candidate can solicit a $50,000 contribution from a supporter to a so-called "independent" expenditure committee supporting that candidate, then the District's $2,000 limit on contributions to mayoral candidates is completely undermined. Such candidate involvement in political fundraising and spending is precisely the type of corrupting scenario that contribution limits are intended to prevent.

Consistent with the Supreme Court's pronouncement in Citizens United that independent expenditures cannot be constitutionally limited because they "do not give rise to corruption or the appearance of corruption,"[12] non-independent — i.e., coordinated — expenditures may permissibly be limited. The Supreme Court has repeatedly emphasized the degree of independence that is necessary to prevent outside spending from "undermin[ing] contribution limits":[13] Only "totally independent,"[14] "wholly independent,"[15] and "truly independent"[16] expenditures qualify.

The anti-coordination provisions in the Attorney General's bill would help maintain a meaningful line between groups making independent expenditures and candidates. The bill establishes several scenarios that if satisfied would create a rebuttable presumption that a campaign expenditure was coordinated with a candidate, including:

- If the campaign provides information about its needs or plans to the person making the expenditure;
- If the campaign and the person making the expenditure share a common vendor providing campaign or fundraising strategy; or
- If the group making the expenditure is run by a candidate's immediate family member or former high-level staff.

These presumptions are reasonable, targeted responses to the kinds of coordination we have seen between candidates and so-called independent spenders.

For these reasons, the Campaign Legal Center supports the Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Act of 2017 and the Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017, and we urge the Committee to take favorable action on these important pieces of legislation.

Thank you again for the opportunity to testify. I look forward to your questions.

Re: Testimony in Support of B22-0008 the "Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017" and B22-0051 the "Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Act"

Dear Chairman Allen and Members of the Committee:

Thank you for the opportunity to submit this written testimony, and to testify at the Committee's hearing on July 10, in support of the campaign finance reform bills the Committee is considering. The Campaign Legal Center supports the Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017, B22-0008 (Attorney General Racine's bill); and the Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017, B22-0051 (Councilmembers White's and Gray's bill).[1]

The Campaign Legal Center has reviewed the bills very closely, and we believe that they would make important improvements to D.C.'s campaign finance laws. If enacted, these bills would meaningfully inhibit the types of pay-to-play scandals that have cast a shadow over the District's government in recent years. Further, the anti-coordination provisions in the Attorney General's bill would help prevent circumvention of candidate contribution limits through "independent" expenditures that are not truly independent of candidates. In this testimony, the Campaign Legal Center offers a few suggestions regarding what we see as provisions necessary for effective pay-to-play legislation, and provides analysis regarding the constitutionality of pay-to-play and anti-coordination reforms.

[1] The Campaign Legal Center also supports the portions of the Clean Elections Amendment Act of 2017, B22-0032, that address coordination. The Campaign Legal Center takes no position on B22-0107, the Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017.

I. The bills before the Committee include important provisions that would begin to address the pay-to-play scandals that have plagued D.C. politics.

The Campaign Legal Center (CLC) urges the Committee to act expeditiously in the passage of a robust pay-to-play law. Enacting pay-to-play reforms would be an important step toward addressing the pay-to-play scandals that have plagued D.C. politics in recent years.[2] The D.C. Council's significant role in oversight of the contracting process — approving contracts worth more than $1 million — creates the appearance of, if not the opportunity for, favoritism of political supporters.[3] We, therefore, agree with the recommendation in Councilmember Mary Cheh's recent report that the Council should consider amending campaign finance law to limit contractors' campaign contributions. As stated in her report, "Where impressions of favoritism cause contractors to refrain from bidding on particular contracts, that lack of competition means that the District loses out—on price, work quality, and engagement of local workers or businesses."[4]

a. CLC supports the Committee's plan to move forward with a bill that includes provisions from both the Attorney General's bill and Councilmembers White's and Gray's bill.

The two pay-to-play bills before the Committee include important provisions that are critical to an effective pay-to-play law. The bills are complementary, and both are thoughtfully designed to address the potentially corrupting influence of campaign contributions from those seeking to do business with the District. CLC supports Chairman Allen's approach of incorporating provisions of Attorney General Racine's bill and Councilmembers White's and Gray's bill into one bill for the Council's consideration.[5] As the Committee considers what it will include in the legislation it submits to the Council, we recommend that the Committee include the following provisions:

- A broader conception of "business dealings": In addition to contracts, the Attorney General's bill would cover grants, tax abatements, and the sale or lease of buildings or land.[6] Covering tax abatements and the sale and use of land and real estate is a more comprehensive approach that reflects the numerous ways the District can engage in business dealings and, accordingly, the individuals and entities on the other side of the business dealing that should be covered by a pay-to-play law.

- Prohibit contributions from high-level employees: In addition to prohibiting contributions from entities contracting with the District, it is important to cover high-level employees of those entities as well. Councilmembers White's and Gray's bill covers officers, directors, and principals with a controlling interest.[7] Including high-level employees in the contribution ban, and establishing a lower contribution limit for their immediate family members, prevents entities doing business with the city from funneling money through their employees and employees' family members. Without this additional coverage, an entity could still curry favor with District officials through contributions from individuals closely associated with the entity.

- Establish a "doing business" database: When New York City enacted its comprehensive pay-to-play law in 2007, the city also established a "doing business" online database to help contributors and campaigns comply with the law.[8] The database lists all individuals and entities subject to New York City's lower contribution limit for individuals and entities that are doing business with the city. The database allows candidates to determine whether contributors are subject to pay-to-play restrictions and provides the New York City Campaign Finance Board with the tools it needs to properly administer and enforce the law.[9] Establishing a doing business database would also help address the concern raised by Councilmember Silverman about how candidates would know who is prohibited from giving to them and, thus, how candidates could ensure they are accepting contributions in compliance with pay-to-play provisions. If there is a publicly available database of entities and individuals prohibited from contributing to D.C. candidates, candidates will have the tools they need to comply with the law.

b. Courts have recognized that contractors' campaign contributions present a heightened risk of corruption.

In the context of government contracting, courts have long recognized that a contractor's campaign contributions, or other forms of personal or campaign support, to officials with authority over contracts raise heightened corruption concerns. Indeed, Congress has prohibited federal contractors and prospective contractors from making political contributions to federal candidates for more than seventy-five years.[10] A growing number of states and localities similarly have taken steps to restrict political contributions from government contractors. At least seventeen states have limits or prohibitions on campaign contributions from current and/or prospective government contractors or licensees.[11] Various municipalities, including New York City and Los Angeles, also have pay-to-play restrictions on the books.[12]

Courts have approved reasonable restrictions on the campaign-related spending of entities doing business with the government. In fact, the constitutionality of the federal contractor contribution ban — which bars contractors from contributing "directly or indirectly" to federal candidates, political parties or PACs — was recently upheld by the en banc D.C. Circuit.[13] The court recognized two governmental interests sufficient to justify the ban: preventing the actuality and appearance of corruption,[14] and preventing "interference with merit-based public administration" to ensure that contracting "depend[s] upon meritorious performance rather than political service."[15]

The Second Circuit has upheld similar laws, including New York City's regulation of contributions from entities "doing business" with the city.[16] That upheld law is expansive, covering persons who have received or are seeking contracts, franchises, concessions, grants, pension fund investment contracts, economic development agreements, or land use actions with the city.[17]

II. The anti-coordination bills before the Committee would help ensure that independent expenditures are "totally," "wholly," and "truly" independent of candidates.

The Campaign Legal Center is keenly aware that the vast amount of money spent on independent expenditures has affected campaigns at all levels of government. The U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Citizens United and subsequent court decisions allowed corporations and labor unions to make unlimited expenditures to influence elections so long as the expenditures are actually independent of candidates.[18] As the amount of unlimited outside spending has increased, the legal lines separating "independent" and "coordinated" spending have become critically important. Candidates, their supporters, and their lawyers have pushed the boundary of what constitutes an "independent" expenditure to absurdity. Without effective regulation of coordinated spending between candidates and their supporters, candidate contribution limits are meaningless. For example, if a D.C. mayoral candidate can solicit a $50,000 contribution from a supporter to a so-called "independent" expenditure committee supporting that candidate, then the District's $2,000 limit on contributions to mayoral candidates is severely undermined. Such candidate involvement in political fundraising and spending is precisely the type of corrupting scenario that contribution limits are intended to prevent.

Consistent with the Supreme Court's pronouncement in Citizens United that independent expenditures cannot be constitutionally limited because they "do not give rise to corruption or the appearance of corruption,"[19] non-independent — i.e., coordinated — expenditures may permissibly be limited. The Supreme Court has repeatedly emphasized the degree of independence that is necessary to prevent outside spending from "undermin[ing] contribution limits".[20] Only "totally independent,"[21] "wholly independent,"[22] and "truly independent"[23] expenditures qualify.

Since Buckley v. Valeo, the Court has recognized that, to be effective, any limitations on campaign contributions must apply to expenditures made in coordination with a candidate, so as to "prevent attempts to circumvent the [campaign finance laws] through prearranged or coordinated expenditures amounting to disguised contributions."[24] To this end, the Court upheld that contribution limits may include not only contributions made directly to a candidate, but also "all expenditures placed in cooperation with or with the consent of a candidate" or his campaign committee.

But the Buckley Court's analysis relied on the assumption that "independent expenditures" would be "made totally independently of the candidate and his campaign."[25] It explained that, unlike contributions, totally independent expenditures "may well provide little assistance to the candidate's campaign and indeed may prove counterproductive."[26] The Court opined further that the absence of coordination "undermines the value of the expenditure to the candidate" and "alleviates the danger that expenditures will be given as a quid pro quo for improper commitments from the candidate."[27]

The Court echoed Buckley's broad language regarding coordination in later decisions on the topic. In Colorado Republican Federal Campaign Committee v. FEC, the Court held that a radio advertisement aired by the Republican Party attacking a Democratic senatorial candidate would not be treated as coordinated because the ad was developed "independently and not pursuant to any general or particular understanding with a candidate."[28] Then, in Colorado II, the Court—again in the context of party spending—noted that independent expenditures are only those "without any candidate's approval (or wink or nod)."[29] Shortly thereafter, the Court again highlighted that the relevant "dividing line" was "between expenditures that are coordinated—and therefore may be regulated as indirect contributions—and expenditures that truly are independent."[30]

The anti-coordination provisions in the Attorney General's bill would help maintain a meaningful line between groups making independent expenditures and candidates. The bill establishes several scenarios that, if satisfied, would create a rebuttable presumption that a campaign expenditure was coordinated with a candidate, including:

- If the campaign provides information about its needs or plans to the person making the expenditure;[31]
- If the campaign and the person making the expenditure share a common vendor providing campaign or fundraising strategy;[32] or
- If the group making the expenditure is run by a candidate's immediate family member or former high-level staff.[33]

These presumptions are reasonable, targeted responses to the kinds of coordination we have seen between candidates and so-called independent spenders. Connecticut and California have adopted rebuttable presumptions as a means maintaining a meaningful line between independent and coordinated expenditures.[34]

[33] A super PAC supporting Mayor Muriel Bowser was established by her former campaign treasurer Ben Soto. Aaron C. Davis, Divided D.C. Council takes aim at Mayor Bowser's super PAC, WASH. Although the super PAC was shuttered shortly after its formation, Mr. Soto's statement that the super PAC's funds would be used to "help reelect allies or unseat council members who do not see eye-to-eye with Bowser" is a prime example of the type of sway that large "independent" expenditures, and the threat of such expenditures, are intended to have on elected officials. Id.

[34] See Conn. Gen. Stat. § 9-601c(b); Cal. Code Regs. tit. 2, § 18225.7(d). Similarly, New York City's Campaign Finance Board uses a "non-exhaustive" list of factors to assess whether an expenditure is "independent" of a candidate's campaign. N.Y.C. Campaign Fin. Bd. Rule 1-08(f)(1). If the Board finds any of the listed factors are present, the burden of production shifts to candidates or independent spenders to provide evidence demonstrating that coordination did not occur. Id. 1-08(f)(2).

III. Conclusion

For these reasons, the Campaign Legal Center supports the Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Act of 2017 and the Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017, and we urge the Committee to take favorable action on these important pieces of legislation. We appreciate the opportunity to submit these comments.

Testimony of Aquene Freechild, Campaign Co-Director, Democracy Is For People Campaign, Public Citizen, before the DC Council Committee on Judiciary and Public Safety

Re: Testimony In Support of B22-0008, B22-0032, B22-0051 and B22-0107

Chairman Allen and Members of the Committee on Judiciary and Public Safety, Public Citizen has over 2000 members and supporters in the District of Columbia. Our members and key staff have long been engaged in organizing for transparency, accountability and public safety in the District. Our overarching goal is to ensure that all citizens are represented in the halls of power.

We are founding members of the DC Fair Elections coalition working to put every day District residents at the center of campaigning in the District. We see the bills before you today as a positive step and a key complement to the DC Fair Elections bill. The DC Fair Elections small donor empowerment bill heard two weeks ago would open up new funding sources fueled by every day District residents, offering a replacement for funds that would be no longer available from corporate sources if Council enacts pay to play legislation.

We thank Chairman Allen and the Committee for looking seriously at a package to address the perception of pay-to-play in DC. It is a powerful and needed step.

In past hearings, I've heard Councilmembers express frustration that the public's perception of corruption on the part of the Council is slow to change. Certainly the scandal with Fort Myer in the Mayor's office as well as the acceptance of illegal campaign contributions by both the Mayor's 2014 Campaign and by Councilmember Todd's campaign, as well as transparency and accountability problems on the part of Todd, have continued to raise public concerns.

But as with any major policy problem, no single bill can rebuild the public's trust or cure a complex problem immediately. There's been a continued flow of scandals in the District, no single piece of legislation can address them all. Taking serious and concerted action on pay to play and related ethics issues is the best possible way to show progress on the part of the council, and further distinguish most members of the Council from those individuals who are running into trouble.

I'd like to highlight in particular the importance of limiting the contributions of family members of contractors. We applaud the broad definition of contractors in the bill introduced by Councilmembers Gray and Trayon White Sr. and strongly encourage the Committee to make sure it's part of any package bill.

Last year, Public Citizen issued a report called District Development on the amount of money coming from corporations, their executives and family members in the early primaries. Giving in the early primaries was dominated by construction and real estate corporations, which gave about 40% of all contributions, but the extent to which this is true only becomes clear if executive and family giving is included.

We'll use Fort Myer Corporation, one of the top contributors in the last cycle and the subject of multiple scandals over the years, as an example. Three months ahead of the 2016 primary, Fort Myer Corporation an affiliated corporation and one LLC gave $3,000 to various candidates. However, Fort Meyer's total giving at that point was over $20,000 if executives, family members and family trusts are included. Fort Myer's two top executives, their immediate families and two family trusts gave an additional $17,700 to the campaigns of Jack Evans, LaRuby May, Vincent Orange, Yvette Alexander and Brandon Todd in the early 2016 primary. The direct corporate giving of this prominent contractor was a small fraction of their total giving.

A serious pay to play bill must include not only the executives and officers of a corporation and their family members, but also disallow use of associated family trusts if possible.

Thank you very much.

Chairman Charles Allen
Committee on the Judiciary and Public Safety
Council of the District of Columbia
1350 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Suite 109
Government of the District of Columbia
Washington, D.C. 20004

Dear Chairman Allen,

This letter is regarding the "Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017" and the "Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017." As you know, these bills have been referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and Public Safety and will receive a public hearing today. The District of Columbia Hospital Association (DCHA) has concerns regarding sections of these bills.

Regarding the "Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017" we are concerned with "Title II – Preventing Pay-to-Play in Business Dealings with the District." Specifically, "Sec. 202, Eligibility to Engage in Business Dealings with the District."

Summary of Section: An individual or organization that contributes or solicits a contribution to a candidate or elected official, their campaign committees, or organizations or individuals closely tied to the official will for two years be banned from engaging in the following business dealing with the District:

1. A grant valued at $100,000 or more;
2. A tax abatement of $100,000 or more;
3. An agreement for the purchase, acquisition, or sale of land;
4. A contract of $100,000 or more.

Comment: DCHA appreciates the spirit of this legislation regarding fair and equitable elections and governance in the District of Columbia. However, the legislation as drafted fails to focus on transparency. We believe that the best way to tackle the aims of this legislation is not to prevent contributors from being able to receive contracts or grants for exercising political expression but to increase transparency. The District already has robust ethics and contribution reporting requirements. We believe if the Council has identified additional problems that it should look at strengthening current reporting requirements.

Further, this legislation contains a glaring loophole. While contributions by individuals and organizations have negative repercussions, there are no additional limitations being placed on organized labor or advocacy groups. This is not meant as an attack on labor. Rather, it shows that while one party is being silenced another still can participate in the political process to a greater extent.

At a minimum if none of our other suggestions are accepted, we recommend raising the legislation's grant or contract threshold to $1,000,000 to provide more leeway to contractors who provide services to the District and wish to participate in the political process.

Regarding the "Comprehensive Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017" we are concerned with "Section 334a, Covered Contractor Campaign Restrictions."

Summary of Section: The District and its representatives may not enter business dealings with covered contractors if:

1. They seek or hold contracts or grants with the District worth $250,000 or more;
2. Solicited or made any contribution or expenditure to prohibited recipients who could be involved in influencing the award of a contract or grant.

Additionally, immediate family members of covered contractors and their officers, directors, and principals may not make contributions of $300 per person per election.

Comments: Again, DCHA appreciates the spirit of this legislation regarding fair and equitable elections and governance in the District of Columbia. However, our concerns expressed above for the "Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017" still hold. Again, we recommend focusing on strengthening current reporting requirements if gaps exist.

DCHA looks forward to continuing to work with the Committee on this issue, which is important to our hospitals and patients. If you have questions, please feel free to reach out to me at (202) 289-6212 or jpalmer@dcha.org.

Mr. Charles Allen, Chairman
DC Council Committee on Judiciary and Public Safety
1350 Pennsylvania Ave. NW
Washington, DC 20004

Dear Chairman Allen,

This is my testimony for the record on the four bills that were the subject of the Committee's July 10, 2017 hearing—B22-0032, B22-0107, B22-0008, and B22-0051.

Having watched the hearing, and done a little poking around on the websites of the Office of Contracting and Procurement, the Office of Campaign Finance, the D.C. Code, Title 1, Government Organization, Chapter 11A. Subchapter III, Campaign Finance, as well as reading various articles in the Washington Post, including its editorials, Washington Times, and Washington City Paper, I've come to think that B22-0008, the Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017 comes the closest to effectively addressing the concerns citizens have that there is a "pay-to-play" culture in DC's political life.

It is aimed at exactly the kinds of things businesses can do under current law that so easily give the impression that corporations, lobbyists and the wealthy are, even if not expecting preferential treatment for their donations, throwing the principle of one person-one vote, so fundamental to our democracy, out of balance.

The bill seeks to eliminate as much as possible any confusion, where so much misunderstanding occurs, about the connection between those who do business with the DC government and those who contribute to campaigns. That, to me, gets right to the heart of the matter, both the "perception" of wrongdoing and the reality of weaknesses or "loopholes" in the current law.

I think it's important too that candidates be subjected to penalties for taking from donors that give outside the law in order that the balance between business/contract and free and fair elections be maintained. It can't all be on the businesses and their allied interests. This would likely require campaign treasurers to need a simple way of checking and that could be done by having the OCF maintain a list of any businesses that have been found ineligible for a contract on its website like the OCP does with its list of barred companies.

In addition, I think it is very important that candidates do not use anyone's, especially, a minor's, likeness without permission in their campaign materials, and for that reason, I support the provision in B22-0107, the Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017 that would require candidates to obtain that permission.

With regard to that bill's other provision seeking that candidates retire all debts within six months of an election: I think something along the lines of wrapping up one campaign committee, including its debts, before the next campaign committee is set up is more realistic and would possibly accomplish the same thing, if that is to prevent one campaign committee from overlapping into the next election, which I think should be avoided. Campaign committees are temporary organizations and they should disappear as soon after the election as possible so long as it is properly done.

Somewhat relatedly, I would like to know before a candidate elect is sworn into office if all is in order with their campaign committee rather than finding out afterwards when it becomes much harder to do anything about it. We the People should know if the person being sworn in has run an honest, lawful campaign, sooner, not later. I'm willing to pay a few more people at OCF permanently or temporarily for the peace of mind of knowing that an elected individual has at least passed a quick review of whether or not their campaign committee operated by the rules.

Judging by the Office of Campaign Finance's web site, it does a lot and some of it, very well. In particular, its Biennial Reports are very highly detailed. Nevertheless, in my experience, the office doesn't have much of a presence outside its appearance in the press when something is being questioned, and it appears to work in a way that lags well behind the election process. It seems content to, in the very gentlest way, regulate after the fact rather than providing clearer guidance at the beginning of the process as to what's allowable and what isn't. I suspect that way of working has mislead some candidates or their campaign treasurers that they have all the time in the world to settle everything up. While I am all for every qualified citizen not being discouraged from running for an office because the OCF is too aggressive in its work or the campaign laws as a whole are too complex, I also think that once a person commits themselves to becoming a candidate, OCF needs to orient them to the rules and the expectation that they will be followed a little more energetically.

Other than the submission of a complaint from someone to the agency, it is not clear what triggers an investigation or an audit, or whether audits are routine or occasional.

I would also like the OCF to include in its reports, or issue separate reports on, the number and nature of violations, complaints received, audits conducted, investigation made and their statuses. We need that information to be collected in order to have some sense of where the problems in the law are so that we are not flying blind when considering proposed reforms or when the Council feels pressured to "do something" in the face of media reports that often defy our belief in innocent until proven guilty.

Lastly, Mr. Chairman, the section of the Code in quotation marks below is very opaque. This is in Title 1, Government Organization, Chapter 11A Subchapter III, Part B, §1-1163.16. Candidates Liability for Financial obligations inured by a committee.

"No provision of this part shall be construed as creating liability on the part of any candidate for any financial obligation inured by a committee.

For purposes of this part, and subchapter 1 of Chapter 10 of this title [§ 1-1001.01 et seq.], actions of an agent acting for a candidate shall be imputed to the candidate; provided, that the actions of the agent may not be imputed to the candidate in the presence of a provision of law requiring a willful and knowing violation of this part or Subchapter 1 of Chapter 10 of this title [§1-1001.01 et seq.], unless the agency relationship to engage in the act is shown by clear and convincing evidence."

In conclusion, I would like to see this round of reforms be as thorough, comprehensive and complete as they can be, with the priority on drawing the clearest of boundaries separating contracting and business matters from our electoral process including campaign finance. And once they are in place, to allow them to operate for at least one four year period, in order to more clearly see where any problems are. Constant reform in these laws is problematic in itself creating a shuffle in which true accountability and transparency get lost. I prefer laws that are understandable and familiar to *every*one, consistently applied and monitored for adherence and effectiveness.

With appreciation for this opportunity to comment,

Sarah Livingston, a regular voter, two-time ANC candidate who didn't win, and not a lawyer.

Testimony before the Hon. Charles Allen
Council of the District of Columbia Committee on Judiciary and Public Safety Hearing
RE: Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017 (B22-0008), Comprehensive Campaign Finance Amendment Act of 2017 (B22-0051), Clean Elections Amendment Act of 2017, (B22-0032), and Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2017 (B22-0107)
July 10, 2017
Testimony for the Record submitted by Abigail C. Nichols, July 24, 2017

Chairman Allen and members of the Council, thank you for your work on legislation this term to ensure good government for the District of Columbia.

I write after listening to the testimony offered at the July 10, 2017, Judiciary and Public Safety Committee hearing on four bills concerning election processes now before the Council.

I fully support controls on campaign contributions by businesses who contract with the DC government. In addition I want to emphasize that campaign donations by contractors and criminal corruption are not the only campaign finance problems needing attention. Soft corruption resulting from campaign donations by other business interests is, in my experience, an equally important source of resident disenchantment with their government. Thank you for the attention being given to all forms of corruption of the democratic process by these bills and by the DC Fair Elections bill which is also before the Council.

At the July 10 hearing there was discussion of the negative effects of campaign donations by contractors on subsequent government decisions and the subsequent public perception of corruption of government. There was testimony that there is little penalized corruption. While a few egregious examples were cited in response, some may take from the hearing an erroneous impression that if the public knew how few convictions there are, the public would be less concerned. No. Not at all. Soft corruption is just as corrupting as criminal corruption. The cynicism about politics that my neighbors and I constantly fight against in ourselves comes other kinds decisions by the executive and legislative branches of our DC government that affect us more directly, specifically alcohol regulation and real estate development.

I have followed alcohol regulation since 2009 when my neighbors and I found ourselves increasingly disturbed by nightlife noise. Beginning in 2013, four years as ANC Commissioner introduced me to development problems as they affected constituents.

Over time I have concluded that the labyrinthine laws that govern alcohol licensing and the consistent overriding of laws governing development against resident wishes can only be explained by money trumping voters when campaign donors' wishes are at odds with voters' wishes. Good things happen when both are aligned, but bad things happen to residents when they are not.

The structure of law in alcohol licensing implies protection of the peace, order, and quiet of residents, but in fact, the government licenses excess of noise from outdoor music and patrons unless residents mount resistance. Resident, and even business, efforts to protect themselves are governed by a tortuous process that is hard to understand and expensive in time and money to pursue. Any successes are overturned by enforcement procedures that systematically find no violations and/or lack effective penalties. Furthermore, there is no precedent in these outcomes that can be applied proactively. Residents of the Palladium Condominium and our other neighbors have filed at least 14 alcohol license protests. In all cases our only aim was to stop late night outdoor music that exceeds the limits of the law. Why should we have to mount the same battle time and time again? As alcohol businesses open in new areas of the city, others go through what we have gone through. Residents with little experience with alcohol legislation and administrative procedures have to repeat our experience and fight the same fight over and over again to prevent 3 am music invading their bedrooms. Efforts to change the law governing alcohol licensing that residents want go nowhere while legislation that business wants sails through.

On another front, residents watch as developers' real estate projects get permission for projects that are larger than allowed by law and regulation. Residents often support allowable zoning variances, but then see their objections ignored when they do find that what developers are asking for is too big for their neighborhood. Construction permits are another problem. My constituents were disturbed by 24/7 demolition for a large project next door in spite of a law that says such permits can only be issued in an emergency. It was clearly a planned emergency abetted by the DC government and the Administrative appeals process which is useless when violation has already been committed. "The issue is moot."

While businesses, of course, have important information and perspectives for the Council to take into account, the fact that business is able to muster more testimony and give more money to campaigns than residents does not mean that their views trump those of residents. The real issue at hand is democracy in the District and the various means by which residents get honest government that responds to their priorities. Low voter turnout in primary elections is one indicator that voters aren't as engaged in local government as is necessary to ensure residents and not large campaign donors with interests other than the public good call the shots.

The bills before the Council offer a way to enhanced resident empowerment. I see the enthusiasm with which residents sign a petition calling for public campaign financing. While grateful for the help of national organizations that know so much about how to ensure good government, good government reform is a DC issue with DC stakeholders are front and center of this effort.

Passage of the four bills at issue here before the Council with resources for proper implementation will go a long way towards renewing my confidence that I can make a difference in my community. It has been discouraging to watch my work and that of others seemingly come to nothing in the individual policy areas in which I am involved. It is so encouraging to be part of the DC Fair Elections Coalition and witness the progress we are making with the DC Council. By passing the essentials of the four bills before the Council at this hearing and the DC Fair Elections bill the Council is doing the right thing and will earn the respect of your constituents.

Thank you for your consideration of my perspectives on this matter.

JULYAN & JULYAN

David S. Julyan

Committee on Judiciary & Public Safety
July 10, 2017

Chairman Allen and members of the Committee, I'm David Julyan and have been actively involved with political campaigns and working for and with elected officials for 45 years. I am a registered lobbyist in the District.

What are the core issues that need to be addressed to bring sanity to the District's current ethical swirl of campaigns, contributions, contracts and lobbying?

I would propose there are two fundamental issues to address:
First, reasonable and appropriate disclosures.
Second, a level playing field where the same rules apply to all.

Reasonable and appropriate public disclosure of political contributions and contacts will go a long way toward curing the problems. If all relevant information on money and contact is made easily accessible to the public, public officials can make their decisions under those bright lights and then be held accountable.

Reasonable and appropriate public disclosure of political contributions should be part of the District's contracting process. A bid or response submission should include a separate exhibit that identifies the political contributions made by the company and its principals. If an awarded contract requires Council review, that exhibit should be updated when the matter is before the Council. Let everyone see what is going on.

Reasonable and appropriate disclosure of lobbying is also straight forward. Today's lobbying reporting system is neither reasonable nor appropriate, but there a simple fix.

BEGA currently requires semi-annually itemizing every contact with a public official. This is confusingly uninformative and inconsistently reported. Rather, lobbyist should be required to make quarterly filings that simply and clearly identifies their issues, positions and the public officials they contacted. That's the key information the public needs to know and it's undeniable that if that information was easily available it would ensure everyone could see who was communicating with whom and about what.

1100 G Street, NW • Suite 655 • Washington, DC 20005 • (202) 367-0800 • FAX (202) 367-0801

BEGA defines lobbying as communicating directly with any official in the legislative or executive branch with the purpose of influencing any legislative action or an administrative decision and BEGA defines a lobbyist as anyone who is compensated for lobbying.

Today, there are many who fall within both of BEGA's definitions, but who do not register and whose compensated efforts to influence public decisions remain in the shadows. That is wrong.

Anyone who is compensated for attempting to influence a public decision should be required to file quarterly. To be specific, if a think tank, nonprofit, advocacy group, labor union, professional association, etc. pays someone to contact public officials to attempt to influence a decision they and their lobbyist should file. Today, that's not the case and it creates both an uneven playing field and disguises both who is actually getting paid to influence District decisions and to whom public officials are listening. It would not include, of course, citizens or volunteers who engage in the process, they aren't paid.

Finally, if the Council is truly serious about this matter, you should consider requiring elected and senior public officials to make the same quarterly disclosure about contacts with lobbyists. It isn't that difficult to keep track of who communicated with whom and on what issues. Take this opportunity to lead by example. If elected officials have to file, the statute's definition of "reasonable and appropriate" is more likely to be grounded in reality.

My proposals will not enamor me to many of my colleagues, this Council or Administration. However, after over four decades in this arena, I am convinced it is the proper path to follow.

I've reviewed the bills before the committee and respectfully ask you to consider carefully both the legality and the appropriateness of proposals that restrict who can engage in the political process.

To propose that a contribution to a political party or political action committee by a family member of a corporate officer should be the basis for prohibiting that company from bidding on a District contract defies reasonableness, fairness and perhaps the Constitution.

There is a line that separates legitimate participation in the political process and "pay to play." I think it's a pretty clear line; one I've had no trouble seeing for 45 years. You know it ... if you can see it. I believe if you focus on a level playing field with reasonable and appropriate disclosures, you will get all the relevant information into the public light and that's the arena where it belongs.

Trust the voters to take it from there.

These are my views and not necessarily those of any of my clients.

Thank you.

COMMENTS OF THE OFFICE OF CAMPAIGN FINANCE

ON

BILL 22-0032, THE "CLEAN ELECTIONS AMENDMENT ACT OF 2017".

BILL 22-0107, THE "CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM AMENDMENT ACT OF 2017".

BILL 22-0008, THE "CAMPAIGN FINANCE TRANSPARENCY AND ACCOUNTABILITY AMENDMENT ACT OF 2017".

JULY 10, 2017

GOOD MORNING CHAIRPERSON CHARLES ALLEN AND MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY AND PUBLIC SAFETY. I AM CECILY E. COLLIER-MONTGOMERY, DIRECTOR OF THE OFFICE OF CAMPAIGN FINANCE. SEATED WITH ME TODAY IS WILIAM O. SANFORD, THE AGENCY GENERAL COUNSEL. THANK YOU FOR THE OPPORTUNITY TO APPEAR BEFORE YOU TODAY AND COMMENT ON THE VARIOUS BILLS INTRODUCED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA TO REFORM THE LOCAL CAMPAIGN FINANCE LAWS.

THE OFFICE OF CAMPAIGN FINANCE (OCF) IS ESTABLISHED WITHIN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA BOARD OF ELECTIONS (THE "BOARD"). THE OFFICE IS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE ADMINISTRATIVE OPERATIONS OF THE BOARD PERTAINING TO THE CAMPAIGN FINANCE LAWS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA. THE MISSION OF THE OFFICE IS TO ENHANCE THE CONFIDENCE OF THE RESIDENTS OF THE DISTRICT IN THE INTEGRITY OF THE ELECTION PROCESS AND GOVERNMENT SERVICE, BY MONITORING, AIDING THROUGH EDUCATION, AND ENFORCING COMPLIANCE WITH THE CAMPAIGN FINANCE LAWS.

DISCUSSION OF THE RECOMMENDED BILLS

BY WAY OF BACKGROUND, THE CAMPAIGN FINANCE ACT OF 2011, WAS MOST RECENTLY AMENDED BY D.C. LAW 20-79, THE "CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM AND TRANSPARENCY AMENDMENT ACT OF 2013" (THE "CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM ACT OF 2013"), EFFECTIVE FEBRUARY 22, 2014, AND MADE APPLICABLE JANUARY 31, 2015. THE CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM ACT OF 2013 ESTABLISHED MORE ROBUST RECORD KEEPING, REPORTING, AND DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS; MANDATED TRAINING AND THE ONLINE SUBMISSION OF FINANCIAL REPORTS; AND STRENGTHENED THE ENFORCEMENT PROCESS.

FOR THE MOST PART, THE PROPOSED LEGISLATION AS A WHOLE WILL COMPLEMENT THE EXISTING CAMPAIGN FINANCE LAWS AND OPERATE IN SYNC TO MORE EFFECTIVELY PREVENT THE EVASION OF THE DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS, AND THE CONTRIBUTION LIMITS AND PROHIBITIONS; AND WILL MAKE CAMPAIGN OPERATIONS MORE TRANSPARENT AND ACCOUNTABLE. AS A CONSEQUENCE, DISTRICT RESIDENTS WILL BE BETTER INFORMED OF THE SOURCES OF THE FLOW OF MONEY IN THE ELECTION PROCESS.

AT A MINIMUM, THE PROPOSED AMENDMENTS WILL INCREASE THE ENFORCEMENT AND AUDIT RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE OFFICE OF CAMPAIGN FINANCE WHERE NONCOMPLIANCE OR VIOLATIONS OF THE ACT OCCUR. IN THE FIRST INSTANCE, THE REVIEW OF THE REPORTS OF RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES MUST ENSURE COMPLIANCE WITH THE NEW REPORTING REQUIREMENTS AND PROHIBITIONS. HOWEVER, AS WILL BE MORE FULLY DISCUSSED, THE UPGRADE OF THE OCF E-FILING AND DISCLOSURE SYSTEM TO INCORPORATE THE NEW REPORTING REQUIREMENTS AND CONTRIBUTION LIMITATIONS IS CRITICAL TO THE FULL IMPLEMENTATION OF THE VARIOUS PROPOSALS.

BILL 22-0032, THE "CLEAN ELECTIONS AMENDMENT ACT OF 2017", WILL FURTHER DEFINE THE TERM "CONTRIBUTION" MADE TO A CANDIDATE OR POLITICAL COMMITTEE (D.C. OFFICIAL CODE § 1-1161.01 (10)(A)) TO SPECIFICALLY INCLUDE THE "COORDINATED EXPENDITURE"; REVISE THE CERTIFICATION STATEMENTS OF INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURE COMMITTEES (D.C. OFFICIAL CODE § 1-1163.13 (A) (2)), TO ALSO STATE THAT THE COMMITTEE "IS NOT CONTROLLED BY, HAS NOT COORDINATED WITH, AND HAS MADE NO CONTRIBUTIONS" OR

TRANSFER OF FUNDS TO ANY PUBLIC OFFICIAL OR CANDIDATE, ANY POLITICAL COMMITTEE, OR ANY POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEE; AND PROHIBIT CONTRIBUTIONS TO A POLITICAL COMMITTEE OR A CONSTITUENT SERVICE PROGRAM FROM ANY PERSON OTHER THAN AN INDIVIDUAL (D.C. OFFICIAL CODE § 1-1163.33).

FROM A TECHNOLOGICAL VIEWPOINT, THIS BILL WILL REQUIRE THE REVISION OF THE CERTIFICATION TEXT OF THE E-FILING APPLICATION OF THE FINANCIAL REPORT OF THE INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURE COMMITTEE TO INCLUDE THE NEW STATEMENTS CONCERNING THE MAKING OF EXPENDITURES BY THIS FILER TYPE. FURTHER, THE IMPORT MODULE OF SCHEDULE A FOR THE FINANCIAL REPORTS OF BOTH THE CONSTITUENT SERVICES PROGRAM (OCF FORM 10) AND THE POLITICAL COMMITTEE (OCF FORM 16), INCLUDING THE SCREENS FOR THE PRINCIPAL CAMPAIGN, INAUGURAL, EXPLORATORY, TRANSITION, OR LEGAL DEFENSE COMMITTEE, WILL REQUIRE MODIFICATION TO ELIMINATE THE FOLLOWING CONTRIBUTOR TYPES: LABOR, BUSINESS, AND OTHER; AND THE SUB-CATEGORY, BUSINESS TYPE.

BILL 22-0107, THE "CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM AMENDMENT ACT OF 2017" WILL REQUIRE A CANDIDATE TO USE SURPLUS, RESIDUAL, OR UNEXPENDED CAMPAIGN FUNDS WITHIN SIX (6) MONTHS OF AN ELECTION TO RETIRE THE DEBT OF THEIR PRINCIPAL CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE (D.C. OFFICIAL CODE §1-1163.10A (2)). UNDER EXISTING LAW, A TIME FRAME IS ONLY SPECIFIED FOR THE RETURN OF SURPLUS FUNDS TO DONORS. THIS PROPOSAL WILL NOT AFFECT THE CONTINUING REQUIREMENT OF A COMMITTEE PURSUANT TO D.C. OFFICIAL CODE SECTION 1-1163.09 (10) TO REPORT ITS DEBTS AND OBLIGATIONS AFTER THE ELECTION UNTIL THE DEBTS AND OBLIGATIONS ARE EXTINGUISHED. THE BILL WILL ALSO REQUIRE THE CONSENT OF ANY INDIVIDUAL OTHER THAN A CANDIDATE WHOSE LIKENESS IS USED IN ANY CAMPAIGN LITERATURE, ADVERTISEMENTS, WEBSITES, OR SOCIAL MEDIA (D.C. OFFICIAL CODE § 1-1163.1).

THIS PROPOSAL WILL NOT REQUIRE THE UPGRADE OF THE E-FILING AND DISCLOSURE SYSTEM.

BILL 22-0008, THE "CAMPAIGN FINANCE TRANSPARENCY AND ACCOUNTABILITY AMENDMENT ACT OF 2017", WILL INCREASE THE CERTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS OF POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES AND INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURE COMMITTEES TO ADDRESS THE PROHIBITION AGAINST THE RECEIPT OF CONTRIBUTIONS SOLICITED BY "COVERED

CAMPAIGNS"; DESCRIBES SEVERAL CIRCUMSTANCES, ACTIVITIES, AND RELATIONSHIPS UNDER WHICH THE COORDINATION OF AN EXPENDITURE WITH A "COVERED CAMPAIGN" WILL BE PRESUMED; REQUIRES FINANCIAL REPORTING BY ANY INDIVIDUAL WHO MAKES INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURES IN EXCESS OF $50 IN THE AGGREGATE AND THEIR CERTIFICATION THAT THE EXPENDITURE WAS NOT COORDINATED WITH A "COVERED CAMPAIGN"; CREATES GREATER DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS FOR ORGANIZATIONS OTHER THAN COMMITTEES THAT MAKE INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURES IN AN AGGREGATE AMOUNT IN EXCESS OF $500; REQUIRES POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES TO ESTABLISH SEGREGATED ACCOUNTS FOR THE RECEIPT OF CONTRIBUTIONS FROM WHICH TO MAKE CONTRIBUTIONS TO CANDIDATES, AND TO DISCLOSE THE RECEIPTS ALLOCATED TO THAT ACCOUNT; AND PROHIBITS THE SOLICITATION OF DONATIONS BY "COVERED CAMPAIGNS" TO ANY INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURE COMMITTEE OR POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEE.

FURTHER, THE "CAMPAIGN FINANCE TRANSPARENCY AND ACCOUNTABILITY AMENDMENT ACT OF 2017" WILL DEEM ANY PERSON WHO MAKES A CONTRIBUTION OR SOLICITATION TO A "COVERED RECIPIENT" AS INELIGIBLE TO ENGAGE IN BUSINESS DEALINGS, VALUED AT $100,000.00 OR MORE, WITH THE DISTRICT GOVERNMENT FOR A TWO YEAR PERIOD, FROM THE DATE OF THE CONTRIBUTION OR SOLICITATION; AND REPEALS TITLE 3, SECTION 3011.33 OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA MUNICIPAL REGULATIONS. THE REPEAL OF 3 DCMR 3011.33 WAS INCLUDED IN THE NOTICE OF EMERGENCY AND PROPOSED RULEMAKING ADOPTED BY THE BOARD OF ELECTIONS ON APRIL 5, 2017 AND PUBLISHED IN THE D.C. REGISTER ON APRIL 21, 2017. FINAL RULEMAKING ACTION IS PENDING. IN THIS REGARD, D.C. LAW 21-235, THE "CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM AND TRANSPARENCY TEMPORARY AMENDMENT ACT OF 2016", EFFECTIVE APRIL 1, 2017, PROVIDES FOR THE APPLICATION OF THE CURRENT CONTRIBUTION LIMIT OF $5,000.00 TO POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEES DURING NONELECTION YEARS.

THE ENACTMENT OF THIS LEGISLATION WILL REQUIRE SEVERAL ENHANCEMENTS TO THE OCF E-FILING AND DISCLOSURE SYSTEM. FIRST, THE CERTIFICATION TEXT OF THE E-FILING APPLICATIONS FOR THE FINANCIAL REPORTS OF THE POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEE AND THE INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURE COMMITTEE (OCF FORM 16) MUST BE ENHANCED TO INCLUDE

THE NEW CERTIFICATION STATEMENTS FOR THESE FILER TYPES. IN ADDITION, THE PROPOSAL WILL REQUIRE THE DEVELOPMENT OF AN E-FILING APPLICATION TO FACILITATE THE FILING OF REPORTS BY THE INDIVIDUAL WHO MAKES INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURES AND THE DISCLOSURE OF THE REQUIRED INFORMATION AND CERTIFICATIONS; AND THE CREATION OF AN ADMINISTRATIVE REGISTRATION MODULE TO ACCEPT INFORMATION KEY TO THE IDENTITY OF THE FILER AND TO ESTABLISH LOGIN CREDENTIALS. THE ADMINISTRATIVE MODULE WILL MANAGE THE REGISTRATIONS AND THE FILINGS.

SECOND, THE NEW PROVISIONS FOR THE INDEPENDENT EXPENDITURE DISCLOSURES BY A "COVERED ORGANIZATION" WILL REQUIRE THE DEVELOPMENT OF A NEW E-FILING APPLICATION WITH SCHEDULES (A & B) TO ENABLE THE RECEIPT OF REPORTS FROM THE COVERED ORGANIZATION WITH THE ENUMERATED DISCLOSURES, INCLUDING THE DETAILS OF THE RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES, AND CERTIFICATION STATEMENTS; AND THE CREATION OF AN ADMINISTRATIVE REGISTRATION MODULE TO ACCEPT INFORMATION KEY TO THE IDENTITY OF THE FILER AND TO ESTABLISH LOGIN CREDENTIALS. THE ADMINISTRATIVE MODULE WILL MANAGE THE REGISTRATIONS AND THE FILINGS.

LAST, THE PROVISIONS REQUIRING THE POLITICAL ACTION COMMITTEE TO ESTABLISH A SEGREGATED ACCOUNT FOR THE RECEIPT OF CONTRIBUTIONS WILL REQUIRE THE CREATION OF NEW SCHEDULES (A & B) FOR THE E-FILING APPLICATION FOR THE FINANCIAL REPORT OF THIS FILER TYPE TO DISCLOSE THE RECEIPTS ALLOCATED TO, AND THE EXPENDITURES FROM THE CONTRIBUTIONS ACCOUNT; AND THE MODIFICATION OF THE ADMINISTRATIVE MODULE FOR THE STATEMENT OF ORGANIZATION FOR THE COMMITTEE TO CAPTURE THE DESIGNATION OF THE CONTRIBUTION ACCOUNT, AND THE LISTING OF THE ACCOUNT NUMBER AND BANK LOCATION.

FISCAL IMPACT OF THE PROPOSED BILLS

THE FY17 APPROVED BUDGET FOR THE OFFICE OF CAMPAIGN FINANCE TOTALS $2,833,463.00. THE SUM OF $2,726,012.00 IS ALLOCATED TO THE PERSONAL SERVICES BUDGET TO FUND THE 30 CONTINUING FULL TIME POSITIONS OF THE AGENCY. WE SUBMIT THE CURRENT STAFFING LEVELS WILL ENABLE THE OCF TO ASSUME THE INCREASED AUDIT AND ENFORCEMENT RESPONSIBILITIES ANTICIPATED UNDER THESE PROPOSALS.

THE FUNDS ALLOCATED TO THE NON PERSONAL SERVICES BUDGET, $107,457.00, HOWEVER, WILL NOT SUPPORT THE UPGRADES REQUIRED BY THE VARIOUS PROPOSALS. THE FY 2017 BUDGET IN THIS AREA (OBJECT CLASS 40), $97,451.00, SUPPORTS THE PROJECTED ANNUAL MAINTENANCE COSTS OF THE OCF ELECTRONIC FILING AND DISCLOSURE SYSTEM ($53,772.96); THE ANNUAL RECRUITMENT AND STAFFING SUPPORT SERVICES FROM THE DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN RESOURCES ($15,000.00); ANNUAL FLEET SERVICES FROM THE DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS ($11,626.78); AND ANNUAL COPIER MAINTENANCE ($7,043.76).

CONSEQUENTLY, ADDITIONAL FUNDING WILL BE REQUIRED TO SECURE THE AFORE-MENTIONED UPGRADES AND ENHANCEMENTS TO THE OCF ELECTRONIC FILING AND DISCLOSURE SYSTEM (EFS) REQUIRED UNDER THE VARIOUS PROPOSALS. THE VENDOR WHO DEVELOPED THE OCF ELECTRONIC FILING SYSTEM, AND WHO HAS BEEN RESPONSIBLE FOR ITS ANNUAL MAINTENANCE AND SUBSEQUENT UPGRADES, PROVIDED THE VERY ROUGH ESTIMATE OF COSTS FOR THE UPGRADES IN THE TOTAL SUM OF $67,320.00.

CONCLUSION

IN CONCLUSION, THE OFFICE OF CAMPAIGN FINANCE AS THE ADMINISTRATIVE AGENCY CHARGED WITH THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR ADMINISTERING AND ENFORCING THE PROVISIONS OF THE CAMPAIGN FINANCE ACT OF 2011, AS AMENDED, STANDS READY TO FULLY EXECUTE ITS DUTIES UNDER THE PROPOSED LEGISLATION IF ENACTED.

THIS CONCLUDES THE COMMENTS OF THE OFFICE OF CAMPAIGN FINANCE.

STATEMENT OF CECILY E. COLLIER-MONTGOMERY
DIRECTOR, OFFICE OF CAMPAIGN FINANCE

PROPOSED LEGISLATION REGARDING BILL B22-0051, "THE COMPREHENSIVE CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM AMENDMENT ACT OF 2017"

JULY 10, 2017

BILL B22-0051, "THE COMPREHENSIVE CAMPAIGN FINANCE REFORM AMENDMENT ACT OF 2017", FOR PURPOSES OF TODAY'S DISCUSSION, INTRODUCES AND DEFINES SEVERAL NEW CAMPAIGN FINANCE TERMS, "COVERED CONTRACTOR", "PROHIBITED RECIPIENT" AND "RELATED PARTY" AS IT SEEKS TO PLACE CAMPAIGN FINANCE RESTRICTIONS ON CERTAIN TYPES OF CONTRIBUTIONS TO POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA. THIS LEGISLATION PROPOSES TO REGULATE CERTAIN CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS DURING PROHIBITED PERIODS PRIOR TO AN ELECTION TO ELIMINATE UNFAIR ADVANTAGES THAT CAN CONTAMINATE THE DEMOCRATIC PROCESS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

FURTHER, THIS BILL WOULD PROHIBIT DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA PURCHASING AGENTS, AGENCIES OR INDEPENDENT AUTHORITIES FROM CONTRACTING WITH A "COVERED CONTRACTOR" IF THAT ENTITY SEEKS OR HOLDS CONTRACTS OR GRANTS WITH THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA WITH A CUMULATIVE VALUE OF $250,000 OR MORE, AND THE "COVERED CONTRACTOR" OR A "RELATED PARTY" HAS SOLICITED OR MADE A CONTRIBUTION OR EXPENDITURE TO A PROHIBITED RECIPIENT BETWEEN CERTAIN PRESCRIBED DATES.

ADDITIONALLY, THIS LEGISLATION WOULD REQUIRE "COVERED CONTRACTORS" TO SUBMIT A SWORN STATEMENT OF ITS COMPLIANCE WITH THE PROHIBITIONS TO THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, AS WELL AS THAT OF ANY RELATED PARTIES, ANY IMMEDIATE FAMILY MEMBERS OF "COVERED CONTRACTORS" OR IMMEDIATE FAMILY MEMBERS OF OFFICERS OR DIRECTORS OF "COVERED CONTRACTORS" PRIOR TO AWARD OF A CONTRACT OR GRANT.

IN ADDITION, THIS BILL SEEKS TO PLACE RESTRICTIONS ON THE IMMEDIATE FAMILY MEMBERS OF "COVERED CONTRACTORS" BY LIMITING THEIR CONTRIBUTIONS TO A PROHIBITED RECIPIENT TO $300 PER PERSON PER ELECTION AND EXPANDS THE AMOUNT OF A CONTRIBUTION ATTRIBUTABLE TO AN ENTITY TO INCLUDE A CONTRIBUTION MADE BY A RELATED PARTY. THE LEGISLATION ALSO REDUCES THE AMOUNT OF CASH AND MONEY ORDER CONTRIBUTIONS PER DONOR FROM THE EXISTING $100 TO $25.

FOR PURPOSES OF ENFORCEMENT, THE FOREGOING PROVISION WOULD MANDATE THE IDENTIFICATION BY "COVERED CONTRACTORS" OF ALL AFFECTED PARTIES, AND THE CREATION OF A DATABASE TO AID WITH THE IDENTIFICATION OF POTENTIAL VIOLATIONS.

IN OUR VIEW, BILL B22-0051's RESTRICTIONS ON FAMILY MEMBERS OF "COVERED CONTRACTORS" AND OF ITS OFFICERS, DIRECTORS AND PRINCIPALS MAY EXTEND BEYOND OCF'S ABILITY TO EFFECTIVELY ENFORCE THE LEGISLATION. NOTWITHSTANDING THE OBVIOUS ARGUMENT THAT BARRING ANY HISTORY OF CORRUPTION, THIS LEGISLATION MAY ABRIDGE THE RIGHTS OF IMMEDIATE FAMILY MEMBERS TO SUPPORT THE CANDIDATES OF THEIR CHOICE TO THE MAXIMUM AMOUNT ALLOWABLE REGARDLESS OF THEIR RELATIONSHIP TO A CLEARLY IDENTIFIED CONTRACTOR, OCF DOES NOT CURRENTLY POSSESS THE ABILITY TO IDENTIFY AND MONITOR IMMEDIATE RELATIVES AND RELATED PARTIES WHO ARE NOT REGISTERED IN OUR SYSTEM.

ENFORCEMENT OF THIS PROVISION WOULD REQUIRE THE CREATION OF A DATABASE BY GOVERNMENT CONTRACTING OFFICERS OF "COVERED CONTRACTORS" THAT PROVIDES INFORMATION REGARDING ALL AFFECTED PARTIES, INCLUDING RELATED PARTIES AND IMMEDIATE FAMILY MEMBERS. THE DATABASE SHOULD BE UPDATED PERIODICALLY TO INCLUDE ALL RELEVANT CHANGES AS THEY OCCUR. EVEN THOUGH THE DATABASE MAY PROVIDE REQUIRED INFORMATION, THE ACCURACY OF

THE INFORMATION WOULD PRIMARILY DEPEND ON THE VERACITY OF THE "COVERED CONTRACTORS" DISCLOSURES. THUS, ENFORCEMENT WOULD ESSENTIALLY RELY ON AN HONOR SYSTEM. FURTHER, INFORMATION MUST BE MAINTAINED AND UPDATED REGARDING THE CHANGING STATUS OF CONTRACTS AS THEY EXCEED AND FALL BENEATH $250,000.

FINALLY, THE ENACTMENT OF THIS LEGISLATION WOULD REQUIRE OCF TO COORDINATE ITS OVERSIGHT EFFORTS WITH SUCH DISTRICT AGENCIES AS THE OFFICE OF CONTRACTING AND PROCUREMENT (OCP), THE DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS (DCRA) AND THE OFFICE OF THE CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER (OCFO). THIS WOULD BE NECESSARY TO FACILITATE THE DEVELOPMENT AND COORDINATION OF INTER-AGENCY SYSTEMS TO ENSURE THE ROUTINE AND TIMELY FLOW OF DATA TO SUPPORT OCF'S ADDITIONAL REGULATORY FUNCTIONS IMPOSED BY THIS COMPLEX LEGISLATION.

THIS CONCLUDES MY TESTIMONY. I WOULD BE PLEASED TO ENTERTAIN ANY QUESTIONS THE COMMITTEE MAY HAVE.

Statement of Karl A. Racine
Attorney General for the District of Columbia

Before the

Committee on the Judiciary and Public Safety
The Honorable Charles Allen, Chairperson

Public Hearing

Bill 22-8, the "Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017"

July 10, 2017
9:30 am
Room 500
John A. Wilson Building
1350 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, District of Columbia 20004

Greetings Chairman Allen, Councilmembers, staff, and residents. I am Karl A. Racine, and I have the privilege of serving as the Attorney General for the District of Columbia. I am pleased to be here to discuss the important issue of campaign finance reform, and specifically to testify in favor of Bill 22-8, the "Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017." I also support the goals and objectives of each of the other bills on the agenda today, and should the Committee choose to move forward with any of them, the Office of the Attorney General ("OAG") stands ready to assist you and the Council prior to mark-up. Before I testify on Bill 22-8, however, I want to touch briefly on why immediate action on these bills is so crucial to the sanctity our elections and the integrity of our government.

On October 12, 2016, OAG partnered with Georgetown University Law Center to host a forum titled Campaign Finance in the District of Columbia. We were honored to be joined by elected officials, campaign finance experts, and members of the public. The comments and questions at this event made clear that there is an overwhelming perception among District residents that big money exerts an undue influence on government decision-makers -- to the detriment of residents' needs and concerns. These perceptions have been heightened as a result of the recently released report entitled "Findings and Recommendations of Mary M. Cheh on the Department of General Services Contracting and Personnel Management." This thorough report highlights the appearance of pay-to-play politics in our city. As Councilmember Cheh recommended in her report:

The Council should consider amending campaign finance laws to regulate campaign contributions by contractors...even the mere impression of favoritism for particular contractors or vendors by government staff can chill competition for government contracts.

To be clear, the perception that politically connected developers and contractors get unfair advantages due to campaign contributions is nothing new.[1] OAG does not propose that this perception is specific to any particular administration or agency; rather, this is a structural concern that requires serious study and thoughtful action by our policymakers. The first step is immediate action on the bills before the Council today.

Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017

One of the most significant changes since District residents voted overwhelmingly to create an independent OAG is that the Attorney General has a statutory mandate to uphold the public interest. In accord with this mandate, on January 5, 2017, I introduced Bill 22-8, the "Campaign Finance Transparency and Accountability Amendment Act of 2017." This legislation proposes to strengthen three major pillars of the District's campaign-finance law: 1) ending the practice and perception of pay-to-play politics; 2) making political donations transparent; and 3) creating a "bright line" between candidates and Political Action Committees (PACs). The proposal also includes other provisions that tighten the District's campaign-finance laws.

[1] Editorial Board, "Ending pay-to-play in D.C.," Washington Post, October 28, 2013

Pay-to-Play

"Pay-to-play politics" is a term that many District political observers have used lately. It is generally used to describe a culture in which donations to politicians garner something of value in return – including financial benefits, access to politicians, and undue influence in our politics. Under current law, donors to District political campaigns can still receive major financial benefits from the District government. The public is often skeptical about whether large contracts have been entered into in the best interests of the District and not as favors to campaign donors; and businesses wonder whether those who do not contribute to political campaigns can compete on a level playing field with large campaign donors. This campaign-finance bill addresses this perceived problem by preventing donors from engaging in large business contracts, major grants, and receiving significant tax breaks with the District for two years.

Creating a "Bright Line" Between Candidates and PACs

The Supreme Court's rulings make clear that, as long as someone is working with a campaign, their spending can be subjected to sensible regulations, like dollar limits. Under current District law, there is a lot of activity that individuals, corporations, and PACs can engage in that isn't regulated – even though they are actually working with a campaign. Our proposal would ensure that when someone works with a campaign, they cannot claim to be independent, and are subject to all the regulations that help keep our elections clean and transparent.

Making Political Donations Transparent

The Supreme Court has said that the government cannot limit the independent expenditures of an individual or a corporation – that is, spending to support or oppose a candidate without actually working with that candidate's campaign. But the government can place important disclosure requirements on this kind of spending to make sure the public knows who is donating the money to support it.

Under current District law, anonymous donors are able to give unlimited amounts of money to an organization in order to make independent expenditures, as long as that organization doesn't have electioneering as its principal purpose. That is a significant loophole in our disclosure laws. The effect is that the fundamental principle that campaign donations be open and transparent is circumvented. District residents are left in the dark about where funds are coming from to support our elections, and this runs counter to every other policy governing campaign finance. The legislation addresses this problem by making sure that all organizations -- not just primarily political ones -- that make independent expenditures above a certain threshold have to identify anyone who has donated more than $200 towards those expenditures.

Other Provisions

This legislation would amend current law concerning PACs to bring the District into compliance with controlling First Amendment case law. By law, PACs can make both campaign contributions and independent expenditures. Based on the D.C. Circuit's decision in EMILY's List v. FEC, if an organization like a PAC makes both contributions and independent expenditures, the Council has the power to limit donations to any PAC account that is used to make campaign contributions. However, if the PAC creates an account that is used only for independent expenditures, the First Amendment forbids the Council from restricting how much money people can contribute into that expenditure-only account. Unfortunately, District law does not make this distinction. It restricts all contributions to a PAC, even contributions that are specifically going to an expenditure-only account. The bill would fix this First Amendment problem while ensuring that our campaign finance laws are as strong as they can be.

The bill would also ensure that members of boards and commissions appointed by District government officials go through the same rigorous ethics training that District government employees undergo.

Before I conclude, I want to express my profound appreciation to the Committee on the Judiciary and Public Safety for holding this important hearing so early in Council Period 22. I also want to thank the good-government advocates and the District residents that have taken time to attend this vitally important hearing. It will take all of us working together to fundamentally improve our election and campaign finance system. I want to note that on June 29, 2017, this Committee held a hearing on Bill 22-192, the "Fair Elections Act of 2017." This bill proposes to create a public financing system for candidates for elected office. As my letter to the Committee expressed, I am in favor of public financing and Bill 22-192. A Brennan Center for Justice and New York University Law School study found that donor diversity and participation are greatly increased in local city races due to their public financing system.[2] This is the type of fundamental reform that we should implement in the District. I pledge to work with the Mayor, Council, and all relevant stakeholders to ensure we achieve a workable, legally sufficient, and readily understandable bill should the Committee move forward with Bill 22-192.

Conclusion

I greatly appreciate the opportunity to testify. As I have noted, OAG is in full support of the policies surrounding each of the bills the Committee is considering today. It is vital that the District address these issues, and OAG stands ready to assist the Council with any legislation it sees fit to pursue. I am pleased to answer any questions that members may have.

Government of the District of Columbia
Office of the Chief Financial Officer

Jeffrey S. DeWitt
Chief Financial Officer

MEMORANDUM

TO:	The Honorable Phil Mendelson Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia
FROM:	Jeffrey S. DeWitt Chief Financial Officer
DATE:	October 19, 2018
SUBJECT:	Fiscal Impact Statement – Campaign Finance Reform Amendment Act of 2018
REFERENCE:	Bill 22-107, Draft Committee Print as shared with the Office of Revenue Analysis on October 17, 2018

Conclusion

Funds are not sufficient in the fiscal year 2019 through fiscal year 2022 budget and financial plan to implement the bill. The bill's implementation will cost approximately $245,000 in fiscal year 2019 and $4.2 million over the four-year financial plan period. The bill's implementation is subject to its inclusion in an approved budget and financial plan.

Background

The bill removes oversight of the Office of Campaign Finance from the Board of Elections and reestablishes it as an independent five-member Campaign Finance Board (CFB)[1] that will administer and enforce the District's campaign finance laws. The bill outlines the requirements a CFB member must meet to sit on the CFB and what types of political activities must be avoided. CFB members are appointed by the Mayor and the appointments are sent to the Council for approval. CFB members are eligible for compensation at a rate of $40 per hour up to a maximum of $12,500 for a member and $26,500 for the CFB chairperson. The CFB should hold monthly meetings which will be subject to the requirements of the Open Meetings Act. The CFB, rather than the Board of Elections, will appoint the Director of Campaign Finance.

[1] No more than three of the CFB members can be of the same political party and each member serves six-year terms (with the exception of the initial CFB that will start with staggered terms).

The bill also establishes certain prohibitions on political contributions by entities and their principals[2] seeking or receiving contracts – defined in the bill as covered contractors – with the District valued at $250,000 or more. Contracting authorities,[3] in coordination with the CFB and the Director of Campaign Finance, will oversee these prohibitions. The chart below outlines the categories of covered contracts and the prohibited contribution periods:

Prohibited Period Commencement: the date of solicitation or other similar invitation or opportunity to contract; except that the prohibited period for tax exemptions or abatements begins at the introduction of required legislation.
Contract Type	Prohibited Period Termination
(1) Rendition of services; (2) Furnishing of any goods, materials, supplies, or equipment; (3) Construction, alteration, or repair of District-owned or leased properties; (4) Acquisition or sale of District-owned properties.	(1) At the termination of negotiations for an unsuccessful solicitation; or (2) one year after the contract terminates if the solicitation is successful.
(1) Leases; (2) Licensing arrangements; (3) loans or loan guarantees.	(1) At the termination of negotiations for an unsuccessful solicitation; or (2) one year after successfully entering into the contract.
Surpluses and dispositions.	(1) Prior to the introduction of legislation before the Council or upon termination of negotiations for an unsuccessful solicitation; (2) at the end of the Council period if the solicitation is successful and legislation is pending or is disapproved; or (3) one year after the effective date of the legislation if the solicitation is successfully approved.
Tax exemption or abatement.	(1) At the end of the Council period if the legislation is pending or is disapproved; or (2) one year after the effective date of the legislation.

Recipients prohibited from receiving contributions will vary by contract, depending on who will approve the contract. Contracts with the Mayor or any Executive agencies prohibit contributions to the Mayor.[4] Contracts with the Attorney General prohibit contributions to the Attorney General.[5] Any contracts that require approval by the Council also prohibit contributions to any member of the [2] Principals include members of a board of directors and senior officers, including presidents; executive directors; and chief executive, operating, and financial officers.

[3] Contracting authorities include the Office of Contracting and Procurement and agencies that have independent contracting authority.
[4] This includes candidates for Mayor, political committees affiliated with the Mayor or a candidate for Mayor, and a Mayor's constituent services program.
[5] This includes candidates for Attorney General and political committees affiliated with the Attorney General or a candidate for Attorney General.

Council.[6] These restrictions apply both when a contractor holds a contract and when he or she is seeking a contract.

The bill bans all District government agencies and instrumentalities from entering into contracts with covered contractors that have made these prohibited contributions. To enforce these prohibitions, contracting authorities must make publicly available on their websites lists of all covered contractors, including their principals, and notify each one about which campaign finance activities are prohibited. The Director of Campaign Finance should cross-reference the lists of covered contractors with its contributor records and notify the contractor, the prohibited recipient, and the relevant contracting authority of any violations. If a covered contractor violates any of the prohibitions, contracting authorities are authorized, at their discretion, to terminate the contract, cancel any option periods, and ban the contractor from contracting with the District for four years. The CFB should publicly disclose the covered contractors who made, and the prohibited recipients who received, prohibited contributions.

Current law requires any contracts over $1 million to be submitted to Council for approval.[7] The bill requires contracting authorities to include additional information when submitting the contracting packages to Council. The additional information includes the identity of all principals affiliated with the contractor, a list of any other contracts the contractor holds or seeks, and a certification that the contractor is not in violation of prohibited contributions laws. If the contractor is in violation of these laws, the contracting authority must also submit a certification from the contractor attesting that it is in violation, but that it will come into compliance. The bill also requires the Chief Financial Officer to include in any tax abatement financial analysis (TAFA) submitted to Council for a tax abatement over $250,000 a list of the abatement recipients and principals and any contributions they have made to the Mayor or Councilmembers[8] since the abatement legislation was introduced, through the date of the TAFA.

The bill also makes several changes around campaign contributions and expenditures. The bill eliminates an $8,500 maximum contribution amount to all candidates during an election cycle, requires contributors to identify employer information, and prohibits the bundling of contributions by registered lobbyists. The bill also reduces the bundled contribution limit to political committees from $10,000 to $5,000. The bill clarifies the definition of coordination to cover any contribution or expenditures made at the explicit or implicit direction, request, or suggestion of, or in cooperation, consultation, or concert with, a public official, a political committee, or an agent of either the official or committee. The bill shifts the dates that political committees need to report their contributions and expenditures during an election year to the 10th day of February, April, July, September, and December and eight days before a primary, general or special election.[9,10] The new reporting dates during a non-election year are the 10th days of February, July, September, and December.[11] The [8] This includes candidates for Mayor or Council and any affiliated political committees or constituent services programs.

[9] Political action committees and independent expenditure committees must report by these dates in non-election years as well.
[10] The current deadlines are the 10th day of March, June, August, October, and December in the 7 months preceding an election and eight days before a general or special election.
[11] The current non-election year deadline is July 31st.

Director of Campaign Finance will be required to keep all paper and electronic documents for ten years.

The bill expands the definition of political advertising to include bumper stickers, radio and television advertisements, text messages, telephone calls, and digital media advertisements so that each of these must include 'paid for by' language. The bill also requires advertisements paid for by independent expenditures[12] to include a list of the top five contributors when applicable.

The bill changes how many of the different campaign finance committees operate and how they must manage their residual funds. Principal campaign committees will be restricted to a six-month period to fundraise for and retire campaign debts using campaign funds. Candidates are also limited to repaying themselves up to $25,000. The bill clarifies that any residual funds left in an exploratory committee can be donated to a non-profit organization in the District so long as that organization has been in operation for at least one year and is in good standing in the District. The bill reduces the maximum contribution amount to an inaugural committee from $10,000 to $2,000, prohibits the transfer of any residual funds to a constituent services program, restricts the Mayor to six months to fundraise for and retire any related debts, and increases the termination date of inaugural committees from forty-five days to six months. The bill increases the maximum contribution amount to a Council Chairperson or Attorney General transition committee from $1,000 to $1,500,[13] prohibits the transfer of any transition committee residual funds to a constituent services program, restricts the Mayor, Attorney General, or Chairperson of the Council to six months to fundraise for and retire any related debts, and increases the termination date of transition committees from forty-five days to six months. The bill clarifies that expenditures from a legal defense committee must be related to a public official's campaign or government activities and duties, reduces the maximum contributions to these committees from $10,000 to $2,000, and prohibits the transfer of any residual funds to a constituent services program.

The bill also requires political action committees to establish segregated non-contribution accounts which are dedicated to making independent expenditures and excludes these accounts from the $5,000 contribution limit to a political action committee per election. The bill expands the $5,000 contribution limit during an election year from any one person to a political action committee's main account to be a restriction during non-election years as well. The bill also reduces from $10,000 to $5,000 the amount by which a political action committee must report bundled contributions.

The bill also prohibits the expenditure of funds from a constituent services program on year-long or season admissions to theater, sport, or cultural events.

The bill requires the Campaign Finance Board to include in its training for candidates and treasurers information on business contributions[14] and the Fair Elections program.[15]

[12] Independent expenditures are those made for the purpose of promoting or opposing a nomination or election; political party; or initiative, referendum, or recall. These expenditures are not controlled or coordinated with a public official or agent operating on behalf of a public official.
[13] This limit does not apply to any self-funding of transition efforts.

[15] Fair Elections Amendment Act of 2018, effective May 5, 2018 (D.C. Law 22-94; D.C. Official Code § 1-1163.32a et seq.).

The bill provides the Board of Elections authority to issue advisory opinions and sets forth the guidelines the Board must follow when doing so.[16] The bill also gives the Board of Elections authority to issue civil penalties of up to $2,000 depending on the infraction and whether the person directly violates or assists in a violation.

Current law allows a public official to designate one government employee who is authorized to solicit and accept contributions on behalf of a principal campaign committee, exploratory committee, or transition committee.[17] The bill clarifies that the designated employee must use annual or unpaid leave when performing these activities and requires the Board of Ethics and Government Accountability to publicly disclose these designated employees on their website.

The bill's covered contractor prohibitions, Council package submission changes, and TAFA provisions apply effective November 4, 2020 and will not apply to any contracts entered into before that date.

Financial Plan Impact

Funds are not sufficient in the fiscal year 2019 through fiscal year 2022 budget and financial plan to implement the bill. The bill's implementation will cost approximately $245,000 in fiscal year 2019 and $4.2 million over the four-year financial plan period.

The bill requires, beginning on November 4, 2020, the new CFB and the Director of Campaign Finance to work with contracting authorities to ensure compliance with the bill's prohibition on contracting with covered contractors who violate the bill's prohibited contributions provisions. To successfully implement these activities, the Director will need to hire a new attorney, auditor, and technology specialist to work with the contracting authorities in reviewing covered contractor lists for violations, providing notice to covered contractors and prohibited recipients about violations, maintaining up-to-date information about prohibited recipients, and to provide certifications for Council contract packages. These personnel, which we expect would be hired in fiscal year 2020 to prepare for the fiscal year 2021 implementation, will cost approximately $886,000 over the four-year financial plan period. The Director of Campaign Finance will also need to upgrade the electronic filing system to accommodate the reviews of covered contractors, as well as make other changes related to campaign contribution and expenditure filing deadlines. This will cost $100,000 in fiscal year 2019. Finally, the CFB is eligible for compensation up to $12,500 per board member and $26,500 for the chairperson. The CFB requires $76,500 annually to provide this compensation.

The CFB can implement the bill's provisions related to contribution limit changes, political committees, including political action committees, constituent services programs, and enhanced training with existing budgeted resources.

The Office of Contracting and Procurement (OCP) manages most of the contracting needs for the District's Executive agencies and will play a significant role in ensuring compliance with and enforcing the bill's covered contractor provisions. OCP will need to enhance its contracting database to be sure it captures information required in the bill, timelines can be tracked to ensure compliance with prohibited periods, and lists of covered contractors can be made publicly available. OCP also does not track information related to non-traditional contractors such as those tied to loans, leases, or dispositions. This database update will cost $200,000 in fiscal year 2020 and $25,000 annually thereafter for maintenance costs. OCP will also need to build a team of six contracting specialists to manage the new information that needs to be collected for the new database, work with agencies to gather data on non-traditional contractors, work with independent contracting authority agencies to gather data on enforcement actions they take, coordinate with CFB on contractors who have violated the bill's campaign finance prohibitions, and manage enforcement of contractors. This team will encompass six contracting specialists and will cost approximately $2 million over the four-year financial plan period. Lastly, OCP will need to build a new training module and hire a campaign finance specialist to ensure the agency's team of contracting officers, specialists, and procurement staff are properly trained and can work with agency staff to comply with the bill's covered contractor provisions. The module will cost $50,000 in fiscal year 2020 and the new trainer will cost $281,000 over the four-year financial plan period. Our analysis assumes that OCP will need to begin planning for the bill's implementation in fiscal year 2020 to accommodate a November 4, 2020 start date for the covered contractor provisions.

Independent contracting authorities will also need to comply with the bill's requirements. Many of these agencies manage a fewer number of covered contractors and can implement the bill's provisions with existing budgeted resources, but without additional resources the activities required for compliance could lead to delays in processing procurements.

Other agencies that work with non-traditional contractors, such as those who receive loans or implement dispositions, will need to collect additional information and provide that to OCP, but they can manage those efforts with existing budgeted resources. The new OCP staff will also work with these agencies to ensure all the correct information is collected.

The Board of Elections requires an additional attorney to assist with issuing advisory opinions and management of the civil fine enforcement. This attorney will cost $68,000 in fiscal year 2019 and $289,000 over the four-year financial plan period.

The chart on the following page summarizes the bill's fiscal implications.

[b] The filing system update accommodates more of the bill's provisions than covered contractors and thus will be needed in fiscal year 2019.
